British Labor Amity Hailed By Roosevelt, Given Report

'Co-operative Spirit' of Workers and Industry Noted by President.

Bargaining Held An Accepted Fact

By Sidney Olson.

Mutual confidence and co-operation evidenced by workers and employers in Great Britain reduces labor troubles to a minimum, the President's Commission on Industrial Relations in Great Britain reported last night.

In a brief foreword President Roosevelt noted:

"To me, the most salient feature of it is the co-operative spirit coupled with restraint which is shown by those who represent both employers and employes in Great Britain.

"Collective bargaining is an accepted fact and because of this the machinery which carries it out is functioning."

No Recommendations.

The 23-page report was without recommendations, in line with the President's pledge that the study was to be made entirely without reference to possible changes in the national labor relations act, long a target of business criticism.

But great stress was placed throughout on the patience, mutual respect and tolerance of viewpoints shown by both sides in England's industrial diputes, leading to quick, inexpensive and peaceful solution of grievances.

Further stress was laid on the fact that both sides, by unwritten agreement, have carefully avoided building up a large body of industrial law; have kept their disputes away from the courts; and have for many years bent every effort toward settling their problems by direct personal negotiations rather than through the government or the courts.

Presented Unanimously.

The report was made by a nine-member commission chosen last June, and was unanimously presented. The members, representing the public, industry and labor, included: W. Ellison Chalmers, William H. Davis, Marian Dickerman, Lloyd K. Garrison, Henry I. Harriman, Charles R. Hook, Anna Marie Rosenberg, Gerard Swope and Robert J. Watt.

High points of the report:

Employers prefer strong unions to weak unions, because strong unions are better able to secure fulfillment of agreements.

Neither the government, organized labor nor employers' associations favor governmental fixing of minimum wages and maximum hours until every possibility of voluntary determination of wages and working conditions in the trade has been explored thoroughly.

Deal With Associations.

Basic changes in wages and hours are commonly negotiated by the national unions with associations of employers.

Union and employer representatives both expressed opposition to compulsory arbitration, imposed either by statute or bargaining contract.

Agreements between employer associations and legal unions or associations of unions rest upon good faith rather than legal enforceability.

Employers almost invariably shut down their plants and do not attempt to operate until the controversy has been settled by ne-

Lewis Aides Own Much of Land Roosevelt Will Touch on Sunday

By John Bertram Oakes.

Representative Lewis reached into the past last night to prove to a Chevy Chase audience at Leland Junior High School that other Presidents before Roosevelt have "interfered" in primary elections.

Concurring in Senator Tydings "passing tribute" Wednesday to Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, Lewis asserted that Hughes "got started on his distinguished public career through nothing less than the so-called 'Presidential invasion'"—of Theodore Roosevelt.

The 69-year-old candidate for Tydings' senatorial toga added that Woodrow Wilson in 1913" threw his weight into the Maryland Democratic primaries for the United States Senate, purging the party to dominate a senatorial candidate who would be true to Democratic ideals and would support his platforms."

Ickes Shies at Rally.

Sponsors of the rally last night had hoped Secretary of the Interior Ickes, a resident of Montgomery County, would preside, but Ickes declined, though he told his press conference yesterday he would "like to" vote for Lewis, if he voted in Maryland.

"I like and respect Lewis' character," Ickes said. "If I were voting in Maryland, I would be very happy to vote for Lewis because he tries to represent the best interests of the people as opposed to private interests."

Ickes hastened to add that he was taking no part in the primary. Reporters attending the press conference laughed. They laughed again when he said: "Honest to God, I'm not."

Lewis extensively quoted from the Baltimore Sun, "the same paper which now justifies Tydings in his attempts to run as a Democrat and vote as a Republican," as saying, in 1913, "Why shouldn't the Democratic Party be democratic? Why shouldn't those tories who wear its livery be driven where they belong?"

Quotes Baltimore Sun.

He went on to quote from the Sun again in 1918, when it approved President Wilson's "invasion" of Mississippi.

In discussing the primary, Ickes asserted he would "look into" charges by Lewis that Robert A. Archer, law partner of Tydings, had collected a fee for obtaining PWA funds for Harford County."

Asked to identify what private interests he had reference to Ickes added, "That statement is specific enough."

He said he had no knowledge that Archer had ever received fees for

"I AIN'T TELLIN'!"
That's what Joseph Burroughs (above), Maryland tobacco farmer at Laidlow's Ferry, said, grinning, when asked if he'd vote for Tydings or Lewis. He'll be going to "see a lady in Mechanicsville" when President Roosevelt visits his home on Sunday.

Ground Executive Car Will Bump Over to Bridge Site Is Tydings' Home Territory, However.

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

Morgantown, Sept. 1.—A lively topic of conversation down here, in advance of President Roosevelt's visit Sunday to help "Little Davey" Lewis beat Senator Tydings, is the coincidence that the President will touch territory in which two Lewis chieftains have a personal, as well as political, interest.

Kent R. Mullikin, of Laurel, campaign manager for Lewis, is president of the Maryland Realty Investment Co., which owns most of the Morgantown area. The firm has a big sign here which advertises "Cottages of charm—Large home sites, $175 up. Terms." It is very pretty country, with a fine view of the Potomac.

W. Bruce Matthews, of La Plata, chairman of the Lewis campaign committee for Charles County, is the son of John Matthews, who owns a 460-acre farm at Laidlow's Ferry, 2 miles from here, which has been designated as the Maryland terminus of a proposed $3,350,000 bridge across the Potomac.

PWA Cold on Site.

Ostensibly, President Roosevelt is coming down Sunday to inspect the bridge site, although the Public Works Administration, which would be expected to provide a large part of the cost, has indicated that no action on the project is contemplated. There has been talk about the bridge for 20 years

Having inspected the bridge site, the President is scheduled to come here and board the yacht Potomac. With Representative Lewis and Representative Goldsborough as his guests, he will cruise down Chesapeake Bay to Maryland's Eastern Shore to make a Labor Day speech on behalf of "Little Davey."

It is understood that some Tydings supporters in Charles County have tipped off the Senator that President Roosevelt will be visiting territory in which Mr. Mullikin and Mr. Matthews are interested.

Nice Gave Invitation.

From all The Post representative can learn, President Roosevelt would have been invited down even if Tydings adherents owned the property. Lewis—or his strategists—conceived the idea of having the Presidene come down because it was hoped he might break Tydings' grip on southern Maryland. And his visit to the Eastern Shore was conceived in the same spirit.

The formal invitation to President Roosevelt to inspect the bridge was sent to Hyde Park last Saturday by Harry Nice, Republican Governor of Maryland, who in 1934 said that

Funds Report On Maryland's Race Due Soon

Expenditures on Campaign to Be Described in Survey Thursday.

By Robert C. Albright.

Maryland investigators for the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee will be asked to report on the Lewis-Tydings contest next Thursday, four days before the Maryland senatorial primaries, Chairman Sheppard said last night.

Sheppard said both candidates have asked personal interviews with the investigators in telephoned requests to the committee. The Texas Senator, who has called a meeting of his full committee for September 8, declined to say whether the Maryland report will be made public.

"That will depend on the nature of the report," said Sheppard. "I will put it up to the committee whether they want to release any part of the findings, or a digest of them."

Representative Lewis last week asked the committee to look into Tydings' charges that the C. I. O. was aiding Lewis and also to investigate contributions to the Tydings' campaign. Sheppard said last night the investigation was not limi-

34 Dead, Scores Hurt, Missing in Japan Typhoon

Tokyo, Sept. 1 (AP).—Japan, clearing away wreckage left by a 75-mile-an-hour typhoon, tonight counted at least 34 dead, scores of persons injured or missing and property damage estimated as high as 100,000,000 yen ($28,000,000).

Authorities estimated the damage to shipping at Yokohama alone at 5,000,000 yen ($1,400,000).

The typhoon struck Japan on the fifteenth anniversary of the 1923 Tokyo earthquake in which 150,000 perished.

Heat Punishment Routine, Guards Tell Prison Inquest

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 1.—Accusations of responsibility for turning on steam heat that stifled to death four convicts in the Philadelphia county prison were juggled today between county prison guards and Deputy Warden Frank A. Craven.

Craven and two guards were star witnesses on the second day of an inquest into the "oven cell" deaths. Their testimony virtually completed the hearing before a coroner's jury assigned to fix responsibility.

Highlights were:

The deputy warden testified he "knew" the steam was on in the prison "klondike" punishment building at least 15 hours before the four baked bodies were found, but said he never ordered its use as punishment.

Guard Capt. ames McGuire disclosed the "heat treatment was routine punishment for unruly convicts—and had been since the 1929.

Guard Sergt. James Hart, accused by Craven and Warden William B. Mills of turning on the heat without authority, testified he acted under the deputy warden's "standing, definite" instructions.

The drama of accusations and cross-accusations was played in a city hall courtroom before a capacity crowd that frequently drew admonitions of "silence."

Coroner Charles H. Hersch has promised at least eight arrests of "guards and higher-ups" after the six men and two women jurors hear final testimony tomorrow.

Meanwhile, a proposed "human guinea pig" test of the baking heat that killed four and prostrated 21 others in "Klondike" was called off "because it might endanger lives" of the ten State policemen and welfare department agents who planned to enter the cells. State Secretary of

Quebec Avalanche Kills 4; 8 Others Also Die in Floods

Quebec, Sept. 1 (Canadian Press). A rain-loosed avalanche today destroyed a crowded four-story apartment house in a Quebec suburb, killing 3 women and a baby outright, injuring about 12 and, according to rescue leaders, leaving a boy buried in the wreckage.

Eight other deaths were caused by the same heavy rains sweeping the Quebec area. Six persons of a single family drowned when their home at Portneuf, 40 miles west of here, was carried away by the flooded Portneuf River, and two died in a washout derailment of a Montreal-Quebec passenger train.

Three bodies of victims in the slide, taken to St. Gregoire's morgue, were those of Rosa LaChance, Mrs. Patrick DeLisle and Mrs. Corinthin Audet.

Only yesterday Mrs. Audet gave birth to a daughter. When her body was taken from the ruins the baby was in her arms, crying.

Another baby came through the crash unhurt, the few-months-old adopted daughter of Mrs. DeLisle, found near her dead foster mother.

Hearst's Chicago Paper to Be Tabloid

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Chicago Herald and Examiner announced tonight that beginning with next Monday morning's editions it would be published in tabloid size.

The announcement said the Herald and Examiner, a Hearst paper, would be the fifty-fourth newspaper in the United States to adopt the tabloid makeup. The price of the paper in Chicago and suburbs will be reduced from 3 to 2 cents.

Land Seizure By Mexico To Continue

Oil Companies to Get Back Investments Only, He Adds.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Sept. 1.—President Cardenas served notice today Mexico would reject Secretary Hull's request that expropriation of American-owned farm lands without immediate compensation be halted.

The government will continue its agragrian program, the President said firmly in a message opening a new session of Congress, adding the expropriated foreign oil industry would receive payment only for actual investments in Mexico.

The President, interrupted frequently by shouts of "Viva President, long live the government," said his reply to Hull's note of August 25 would be a reaffirmation of policies already set forth in his "Mexico for Mexicans" program.

Spurns Arbitration.

Those policies were elaborated August 3 when Mexico, replying to Hull's first note of July 23, said flatly she did not intend to halt reforms because she lacked money to pay for expropriated properties.

Hull in the July 23 note declared uncompensated seizure of American-owned farm lands constituted "confiscation."

Agragrian reform has been one of the greatest demands of the Mexican people, Cardenas said. He termed "unjustified" Hull's suggestion for deposits guaranteeing payments for expropriated lands and made it clear there would be no submission of the question to arbitration under international law.

He emphasized that his government wished to continue friendly relations with the United States and noted "with satisfaction their desire for amicable solution of the question."

But, he added, Mexico "does not propose to follow the United States Government in its viewpoint regarding the land question, and instead will ratify the Mexican attitude as expressed in previous notes."

Cardenas said Mexico recognized her obligation to pay for the lands, but "under necessities of the people the government cannot make immediate payment."

He reiterated that Mexico could not give "special consideration" to foreigners in indemnification, inasmuch as Mexico's citizens have not been compensated for seized lands.

Cites Gold Abandonment.

[The President renewed, however, his offer in his August 3 note to discuss with the United States the value of the lands affected in

Indianhead Man Hurt Fatally in Dynamite Blast

Alexander Butteaux, 62, of Indianhead, Md., was fatally injured yesterday when 13 sticks of dynamite exploded in the room where he was working.

Butteaux's right hand was blown off and his stomach punctured. Butteaux was brought to Providence Hospital from the naval powder factory at Indianhead and died several hours later.

The florist was working in his shop, a short distance from his home, when the dynamite went off. The cause of the explosion was not determined. The blast demolished the shop.

Butteaux formerly was employed at the naval powder factory as a gardener. He retired several years ago.

He was preparing to blast some stumps on the premises where the accident occurred.

1,000 U.S. Tourists Reported Foodless In Mexico Flood

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 1 (U.P.).—A man who said he was Hal C. Worth, of Dallas, appealed in a telephone call from Valles, Mexico, to a San Antonio radio station tonight for aid "for a thousand American tourists stranded and in distress" at the Mexican village because of floods.

"There are 1,000 of us sleeping in our cars and in the streets," Worth said. "Food is running low. We've stood about all we can stand and we want to get out."

Reports from Mexico City today said "more than 300" tourists were stranded along the Pan-American highway near Valles by floods

Dixie Davis Describes Trysts With Dare Girl

HOPE DARE.

Squirms, Blushes as He Swears They Were Always Chaperoned by Mother and Detectives; Testimony Mainly Unshaken.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 1.—A shifty and a combative witness, using his legal knowledge at times and sometimes ignoring it, J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, former counsel for the Schultz mob, emerged unshaken by cross-examination today in supreme court, in the trial of James J. Hines on charges of protecting the policy racket against police and courts. His detailed story of a political alliance between Hines and the underworld was scarcely scratched.

At the end of five hours of throwing questions at him, Lloyd Stryker, chief counsel for the defense, confessed to weariness. He asked Supreme Court Justice Ferinand Pecora at 4:45 p. m., for an early adjournment, and said he might not have many more questions to ask of Davis today, though he wanted time to study his notes.

Stryker assailed the credibility of the witness; charged him with plotting against the veteran Tammany leader who once was his patron. He labored sturdily to portray Davis's trips from the Tombs to the home of Hope Dare, his showgirl mistress, in the custody of detectives from the district attorney's office, as part of a process whereby he was "induced" to aid in frame-up against Hines.

Stryker read copiously to the jury from appeals which Davis had addressed to the court when fighting subpoenas in the investigation of the policy racket by the "runaway grand jury" of 1935. Stryker succeeded in placing before the jury evidence indicating that William C. Dodge, then district attorney, forced Davis to testify, against his will, though Dodge was accused by the witness on Wednesday of having consired with Hines to throw that grand jury off the trail of the gang. Dodge said today he hoped to testify before this trial is ended, and to contravert "a lot of untruths" that have been told about him.

The defense counsel got Davis to

U. S. Defense To Link Cities' Power Plants

Navy to End 'Bottlenecks;' Atlantic Squadron of 14 Ships Ordered.

President Roosevelt and a group of high Government officials yesterday discussed plans for linking the power systems of strategic American cities as the Navy announced formation of a temporary Atlantic squadron in the most significant developments in the field of national defense since the passage of the $1,000,000,000 naval expansion bill last spring.

Acting Secretary of War Louis Johnson said after the conference at the White House that a committee would be named to draft a plan for removing what he termed "bottlenecks" which might hinder the transmission of electricity from one locality to another. Johnson said he had been named chairman of the group by Mr. Roosevelt.

"We expect to have a final report ready before the end of the year," he said.

Navy Reticent.

Although naval officials were peculiarly reticent on the formation of the Atlantic squadron, they were well aware of the extreme significance that will undoubtedly be attached to the action in Europe

State to Take Over Schools In All Austria

Higher Education Facilities for Jews Limited to 450 in Vienna.

Special Cable to The Post.

Vienna, Sept. 1.—In a speech delivered at Stuttgart yesterday, Joseph Buerckel, Reichsfuehrer Hitler's commissar in Austria, put a definite end to all private schools in Austria. He claimed that these schools belong to the state and today the Viennese Voelkischer Beobachter announced that there will be no more confessional schools in this country.

The century-old schools of the Benedictine Abbeys, which raised many generations of prominent men in this country, are now a thing of the past, and so is the Jesuit College. The new regulation applies also to the Protestant schools and to all privately owned secular schools which have no connection with any particular church.

Wherever it can be done, these latter will be taken over by the state municipalities or provincial authorities. But the Catholic monks and nuns, who were teachers, will all lose their jobs.

Already, in the past month, the Jewish pupils of all school categories were provisionally separated from their non-Jewish colleagues.

Man's Body, Weighted by Iron, Found on Fort Belvoir Beach

The body of a well-dressed man, apparently murdered, was washed ashore on the beach of the Potomac River, near the station of the Bureau of Fisheries at Fort Belvoir late yesterday.

Around the victim's neck was a 25-pound iron bar, tied with a rope. An autopsy performed by Fairfax County Coroner C. A. Ransom revealed the man had died as the result of a broken neck. He had been in the water between five and seven days, but there was little water in the lungs.

Authorities said the dead man was between 35 and 40 years old. He wore a pair of black leather boots, which bore the marking "U. S. A." This led officials to inquire at all Army posts and CCC camps for any officers or men missing from their rosters.

Discovery of the body was made by W. R. Newcomb, director of the station. Except for a coat, the victim, who had been in the water about five days, was fully clad. There were no other identifying marks about his clothing.

Authorities said the dead man was between 35 and 40 years old. He weighed about 157 pounds and was 5 feet 10 inches tall. Summoned to the scene, Coroner C. A. Ransom, of Fairfax County, ordered the body taken to Wheatley's undertaking establishment for an autopsy.

The clothes the victim wore, under Dr. Ransom's order, were bundled up and left undisturbed after the removal of the body.

A rope, noosed about his neck, was knotted about the iron bar, described as a piece of twisted rail.

Working on the theory that the dead man had been murdered, officials speeded their investigation. Virginia State Police Sergt. Edward McDermott was in charge.

Hitler Rejects Czech Truce, Nazis Report After Parley

Talks to Fuehrer And Highest Aides

Expected Again Today at Berchtesgaden for 'Vital' Conference.

By the Associated Press.

Berchtesgaden, Germany, Sept. 1. High Nazi sources tonight reported Konrad Henlein, leader of Czechoslovakia's Germanic minority, had departed by plane for home bearing Adolf Hitler's rejection of an important part of Czech peace plans but carrying new counter-proposals.

Hitler was understood to have rejected the part of Premier Milan Hodza's "Plan No. 3" calling for a three-month truce in Czechoslovag-German negotiations to permit passions of the contending parties to cool down.

The Reichsfuehrer's position reached after a long conference with Henlein and highest Nazi officials, was said to be that a more prompt solution of the danger-fraught Sudeten minority question was desirable.

What counter-proposals Henlein carried with him to Czechoslovakia remained a mystery.

Top Nazis Present.

Conferring with Hitler and Henlein at the Reichsfuehrer's Bavarian mountain retreat were Field Marshal Goering, Propaganda Minister Goebbels and Rudolf Hess, deputy Nazi Party leader—the top of the Nazi hierarchy.

At the same time Britain's Ambassador to Germany, Sir Neville Henderson, was tackling the same Czech-German problem with Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop at Sonnenberg, the latter's country home, near Berlin.

Henderson, fresh from conferences with the British cabinet in London, was believed to have laid before the foreign minister Britain's latest expressions for maintenance of peace in central Europe.

Vital Talk Today.

Reliable sources said Von Ribbentrop would come to Berchtesgaden tomorrow when a conference of even greater importance than today's will be held.

It was understood Henlein would return for the next meeting after quickly laying Hitler's counter-proposals before Czech officials.

The Sudeten "Little Fuehrer" wore no uniform when he arrived here today for his meeting with Hitler, the fourth this year.

Henlein's adjutant said the present visit was at the suggestion of Viscount Runciman, Britain's unofficial mediator in the central European quarrel, who wished to push a peaceful settlement of the trouble.

Official quarters insisted the really vital talks, from the German viewpoint, will take place tomorrow and that nothing official on results will be made known until Friday night.

Japanese Crushed On Yangtze, 4,000 Killed, China Says

Hankow (Friday), Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Chinese reports said today Chinese troops inflicted a "crushing defeat" on two Japanese divisions southwest of Juichang, which is southeast of Hankow.

"It was the biggest victory since Taierhchwang" in north China last year, it was announced.

An earlier communique said 4,000 Japanese were killed.

Planes and artillery assisted a "fierce counter advance, cutting Japanese lines between Susung and Hwangmei," on the north bank of the Yangtze River below the capital, it was announced.

4 Foreigners In Capital to Study Housing

3 Britons, New Zealander Inspect Large-Scale Projects Here.

Three British and one New Zealand housing and town planning officials were in Washington yesterday to learn from local and Federal Government officials American methods.

Object of much interest was Arthur Harper, in charge of large-scale housing developments for the New Zealand government. He was introduced at a luncheon of officials at the Wardman Park Hotel by John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, as a man "doing things some of the rest of us are only dreaming about."

Harper modestly explained in an interview that his government could be far ahead of the rest of the world in housing developments because "conditions there are different."

Problem Differs.

The housing program in New Zealand differs, he said, because there are no slums which have to be cleared first. "Of course," he hastened to explain, "there are conditions about which we are not pleased, but there are no slums as you know them."

This means that his country does not have to concentrate on building houses for people of the lowest income groups as do other countries.

"Our program is aimed at providing good, modern houses for everyone," he said. "A government program like that is not considered interference in my country, the people expect it of us.

"Further, we do not have to worry about homes for the lowest income groups because there are minimum wage laws which try to assure every worker an income adequate for a decent living. We don't have many unemployed."

Inspect Projects Here.

Only recently has the New Zealand government started to construct houses itself. When first faced with a housing shortage the government financed private construction with loans up to 95 per cent of the cost, with the result that most of the construction has been done by private enterprise.

At the luncheon officials described various Government housing projects here. The foreign visitors were then taken on a tour to Mount Vernon, and Buckingham and Colonial Village developments. Today they will be shown Greenbelt, Langston and projects of the Alley Dwelling Authority before leaving the city.

The visitors were greeted by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen. They were Geo. L. Peple, president of the International Federation of Housing and Town Planning; Donald C. L. Murray, secretary, and C. S. Righton, of Manchester. They and many of the domestic officials had just returned from the Sixteenth International Congress on Housing and Town Planning in Mexico City.

Husbands Liable For Wives' Bill

Husbands are liable for ordinary purchases made by their wives, unless it is shown a wife has an estate or income of her own at the time of the purchase. Judge Nathan Cayton ruled yesterday in Small Claims Court.

The question arose in a suit against Mrs. J. K. Arnold, who purchased household furnishings while living with her husband. Defended by Attorney Daniel B. Maher, Mrs. Arnold cited the married women's act and showed that since she had no estate or income at the time of the purchase, her husband was liable.

Judge Cayton held that despite the married women's act, which gave the wife the right to make contractural obligations, the old common law rule applied and that the husband was responsible.

2 Md. Appointments To Annapolis Are Open

Representative David J. Lewis, candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination in Maryland, opposing the incumbent, Senator Tydings, yesterday announced that he has two appointments to the Naval Academy, which he will make by competitive examination given by the Civil Service Commission.

Appointees will enter the Academy during the summer of 1939. There are no available appointments to West Point in Representative Lewis' district until 1940.

Funeral services for Henry A. Shore, 74, retired chief clerk of the Railway Mail Service, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the William E. Sardo chapel, 412 H street northeast. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Shore died Wednesday at his home, 1304 Otis place northwest, after a long illness. He had been employed by the Postoffice Department for 50 years when he retired in 1935.

Md. High School Seniors To Get Driving Lessons

Princess Anne, Md., Sept. 1 (AP).—Seniors in Somerset County high schools will do part of their classwork in automobiles this year.

School officials announced today classes in driving and highway safety will be held for an hour each week. Similar classes will be given in Worcester and Wicomico counties.

State policemen will instruct the students.

Maryland Campaign Report By Fund Inquiry Due in Week

Politics

ted to those charges. He said the Maryland investigators have carte blanche authority to ferret out any evidence pertinent to the broader Senate investigation.

Lewis Files Report.

Other developments:

Representative Lewis filed with the committee a supplementary report showing aggregate contributions to his own campaign of $8,908, and expenditures, including bills payable, of $13,954. These totals included sums previously reported by Lewis on July 20. Tydings has made no return since July 19, when he reported $8,560 in contributions and $5,512 in expenditures.

Charges by Senator Tydings that resignation of Chief Justice Hughes was sought by New Deal Senators during the court plan fight, met conflicting responses.

Quarters close to the White House said President Roosevelt turned thumbs down on proposals that court plan objectives be reached by retirement of justices. It was said that a Senator and a Representative proposing this solution were told the President was not interested in trafficking in judges.

Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee who took a leading part in the court fight, said the proposed compromise charged by Tydings never had come to his ears.

Logan Defends George.

Meanwhile Logan took issue with the President's opposition to Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, because of his conservative views. Logan said George is "a liberal and a progressive." He did not challenge the President's right to intervene in State primaries, but he questioned the results.

Belief that the Administration's purge might actually be directed at 1940 was suggested by Senator Brown (Democrat), of New Hampshire. Brown voiced doubt that the President was seeking a third term, but suggested the President might want a say in nominating his successor.

In Portland, Oreg., Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, predicted the President would not be elected to a third term, declaring new issues and new candidates would arise before 1940. He insisted neither South Carolina nor California primary results were a "slap" at the President.

Lewis Invited Quiz.

The Senate's investigation of the Maryland contest followed a written request by Lewis that the committee look into advertisements he said were authorized by Fred A. Dolfield, treasurer of the Tydings campaign committee, and which said the C. I. O. was "actively financing" the nomination of Lewis. He also asked investigation of certain contributions to the Tydings campaign.

Word yesterday that Tydings, as well as Lewis, has sought interviews with investigators, recalled that at the time of the inquiry Tydings said he "may have some suggestions to offer the committee as how best it can find out what actually is going on in the Maryland campaign." Sheppard said committee investigators would have questioned both candidates at all events. He said no preliminary report had been submitted to him, but investigators had a free hand in examining all evidence falling within the scope of the Senate's campaign inquiry.

Representative Lewis' financial report to the Senate committee yesterday was supplementary to his previous returns, which had showed $1,183 in contributions, $1,033 in expenditures, and $183 in bills payable.

Lists No C. I. O. Cash.

Yesterday's report showed $7,725 additional contributions: $7,775 in expenditures, and a deficit of $5,145 representing unpaid bills. Lewis listed no contributions from the C. I. O. as an organization, although that is one of the Tydings camp charges that the committee is investigating at Lewis' request.

In addition to $1,500 in contributions by Lewis himself, the report listed contributions of $1,910 from Kent Mulliken, of Laurel, and $1,000 from Eugene Casey, of Gaithersburg, both active in the Lewis campaign.

Contributions of $100 or more included $500 from H. C. Zapf, of New York; $125 from Willis J. Ballinger, of Baltimore; $100 from Owen E. Hutchins, of Cumberland; $100 from George Magner, of Baltimore; $100 from H. Egley, of Baltimore, and $100 from Edward J. Donohue, of Frostburg.

Washington, D. C., contributors included C. T. Clayton, $100; Robert Watson, $10; Mercer C. Johnson, $10; David Blackshear, $10; David W. Bush, $5; William J. Carey, $5; Dr. R. L. Hogue, $50; W. Jett Lauck, $15; Walker Stone, $10; Walter C. Myer, $25; Florence M. McLauth, $2; Otis J. Meyers, $1; Ursula McG. Kirby, $5; Harold G. Waters, $5; Alice Thacher Post, $5, and George M. Roberts, $5.

Congressmen Tried To Get 13,000 Jobs, TVA Inquiry Told

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 1 (AP).—Gordon L. Clapp, TVA personnel director, told a congressional investigating committee today that about 13,000 applications for jobs received by the TVA included recommendations from members of Congress, but he declared these indorsements did not determine the applicants' employment.

Clapp, under examination by Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, offered this testimony as the committee neared the end of the first phase of its inquiry into operations of the Federal agency. Wolverton accused Clapp and his associates of injustice in certain individual employment matters.

The TVA legal staff was described by Representative Barden (Democrat), North Carolina, as "an unusually fine group," but "lacking in expecience, which has made necessary employment of outside counsel."

James Lawrence Fly, TVA counsel, previously testified there were 27 attorneys on his staff at an average annual salary of better than $4,000. He said John Lord O'Bran, Buffalo attorney, had been employed as special counsel in two cases for a total fee of $75,000.

The committee, planning to complete seven weeks of hearings tomorrow, held its second evening session tonight. The inquiry probably will be resumed in Washington in October or November.

U. S. Agency Approves Florida Child Aid Plan

The Social Security Board yesterday approved Florida's plan for aid to approximately 3,800 dependent children. The new Florida program will be administered by the State welfare through 12 districts for which welfare boards appointed by the Governor are responsible.

A.F.L. Will Ask High Pensions To Unemployed

Green Says Payments by States Are Too Low for 'Decent' Life.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 1.—The American Federation of Labor, it was indicated tonight, probably will renew its attack on the unemployment problem by calling for higher unemployment compensation payments.

William Green said the executive council was drafting a report for the A. F. of L. convention in Houston in October on the whole question of social security for the worker and would make its specific recommendations known then.

Green said jobless insurance benefits now being paid by States under standards set up by the Social Security Board were not adequate "to maintain a man and his family decently."

Calls for Change.

He said the unemployment compensation system should be changed "to meet the requirements of our economic and social life."

"If the employers provided more jobs," he added, "they would be relieved to that extent of taxes needed to provide unemployment compensation."

The jobless insurance system now pays benefits ranging from $5 to $15 a week for periods of from 12 to 14 weeks. Green also objected to the time limit and said it should be lengthened.

Urges Dies Onward.

The council today also reviewed the work of the Dies Congressional committee investigating un-American activities, and issued a statement urging the committee to carry on its inquiry "diligently and fearlessly"—"let the chips fall where they may."

Efforts to "belittle and ridicule" the committee operations, the council added, indicated a frantic attempt "to head off investigation."

John P. Frey, head of the A. F. L. metal trades department, was one of the chief witnesses before the House committee. He charged that Communist Party members had obtained a foothold in John L. Lewis' C. I. O. and that many of Lewis' organizers were Communists.

Hallie Flanagan Protests.

Hallie Flanagan, director of the Federal Theater Project, yesterday called attention to "inaccurate and misleading charges" concerning the conduct of the project and to the fact that the Dies House Committee for investigating un-American activities had not called any official of the project as a witness.

In a letter to Representative Dies, chairman of the committee, Miss Flanagan pointed out that she had offered to testify when the first accusations were made against the project and had advised the committee that all officials connected with the project were available as witnesses.

Fire Razes Va. School On Day of Reopening

Gate City, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—Pupils trudged to the grade school at Slant, 1 miles from here, and then trudged home again.

The school building was destroyed by fire early today. Sheriff J. E. Quillin said he suspected the blaze was of incendiary origin. Other Scott County schools opened this morning as scheduled.

Dr. Taylor B. Yeakley.

Berkeley Spring, W. Va., Sept. 1. Services were held here this morning for the late Dr. Taylor B. Yeakley, 64, Lutheran pastor, of New Kensington, Pa., who died here late Monday. He had been taking the baths at this summer resort. The body was taken to Winchester, Va., for interment.

Farley Calls on Maine to 'Get In Step With Rest of United States' and Go Democratic Sept. 12.

By the Associated Press.

Waterville, Me., Sept. 1.—James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, called on Maine tonight to go Democratic September 12 and thus "get in step with the rest of the United States."

FARLEY.

He told a Democratic rally at the Colby College athletic field "our adversaries" would watch the Maine election, in an effort to gather "ammunition and argument for use in the next Presidential conflict."

Farley put in good words for former Gov. Louis J. Brann, Democrat, who is running against Republican Gov. Lewis O. Barrows, and for the three Democratic nominees for Congress—Harold Dubord, Harold B. Emery and Melvin P. Roberts.

Greenville, S. C.—Complete official figures from Tuesday's Democratic primary showed that Representative Heyward Mahon, of Greenville, had been defeated by eight votes for renomination to Congress from the Fourth District by Joseph R. Bryson, also of Greenville. Mahon announced he would ask a recount. The vote was: Bryson, 31,634; Mahon, 31,626.

Williams Grove Park, Pa.—Senator Davis, seeking re-election, called for repeal of the compulsory control features of the Federal agricultural adjustment act of 1938. At a Republican rally at this resort, Davis said:

"I feel certain the farmers of Pennsylvania will not be satisfied until compulsion is stricken from the act."

Davis said the farmers of the Nation "will not accept the view they must sacrifice all freedom in order to obtain prosperity."

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee warned five senatorial candidates that the time for filing their answers to a committee questionnaire had expired. Listed as having failed to answer the committee's first questionnaire were Newton Jenkins and Michael Igoe, of Chicago; Roscoe C. Douglas, of Saxton, Ky., and Representative Thomas R. Amlie, of Elkhorn, Wis.

The committee previously had asked Representative Smith, of Oklahoma, another senatorial candidate, to supply more data.

Herman L. Ekern, of Madison, Wis., Progressive candidate for the United States Senate, reported expenditures of $1,156 and contributions of $15.

DoDver, Del.—Delaware Republicans moved smoothly toward their State primary, September 10, with only eight contests indicated for delegates to the party convention here September 14. Sussex County, where a local factional fight is in progress, will be the scene of all except one of the delegate contests. Kent County will have one contest.

The Sussex committee named a committee of five to investigate the qualifications of contenders in the contested districts.

San Francisco.—Republicans apparently were assured of adding at least one Congressman to their representation in California's Congressional delegation of 20.

The State's four Republican incumbents won on both major party tickets. So did Leland M. Ford, Santa Monica Republican, in the Sixteenth District, which Representative John F. Dockweiler abandoned to make an unsuccessful race for Governor. Los Angeles Democrats took steps to "draft" Dockweiler to run as an independent against Ford.

Thirteen Democratic Congressmen were renominated, but only two will escape Republican opposition.

Harrisburg, Pa.—David Williams, secretary of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, said the federation might support the Republican ticket in November "if an investigation proves the Democratic State organization is making agreements with the C. I. O."

• • • •

Senator Murray (Democrat), Montana, said "the sure way to stop the imports the Republicans are worrying so much about is to to have some more of Hoover and 30-cent wheat and corn." He quoted a speech by Representative Snell (Republican), New York, in which Snell listed 24 farm commodities and said imports of these were larger in 1937 than in 1932.

"Our foreign trade in 1932 under Hoover had fallen to the lowest point in 26 years, while in 1937 under Roosevelt it had been restored to almost twice the amount it had reached under Hoover," Murray said.

"New issues, largely international, will arise and new candidates on these issues will press all present issues and all present candidates to the background," he said.

Rites to Be Held Here For Amanda L. Graves

Funeral services for Miss Amanda L. Graves, 73, a Washington resident for half a century, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the oak Hill Cemetery chapel. Word of her death at Concord, N. H., was received here yesterday. A native of Georgetown, she moved to New Hampshire in 1918.

She leaves four brothers, David E., Robert B., Charles T. and George Graves, and two sisters, Mrs. Lottie J. Martin and Mrs. Henry Croson.

1,874 August Nuptials Set New August High

Elkton, Md., Sept. 1 (AP).—The marriage business at this eastern seaboard Gretna Green, boosted by more stringent laws in New York and New Jersey, soared to an all-time monthly high of 1,874 during August, the clerk of court reported today.

That total brought to 8,030 the number of licenses issued here this year, compared to 6,718 for the same period last year and approximately 11,000 during all of 1937.

Jackson Says He Is Opposed To Sales Levy

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 1.—Mayor Howard W. Jackson asserted tonight his city rival for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, was "trying to make political capital for himself out of the tax problems of the State."

Replying to demands of O'Conor that the mayor state his views on State taxation questions, Jackson told a women's Democratic Club rally O'Conor "doesn't really want to know but I'll tell him anyhow—and also my views as to his so-called program."

Opposes Sales Tax.

The mayor said he was opposed to any gross receipts tax or sales tax or increased tax on real estate.

"In this city, I am happy to say," he continued in a prepared address, "we have so managed our financial affairs that not a single special form of taxation has been imposed on our people. The record speaks for itself. Mr. O'Conor is familiar with that record.

"He does not have to ask me any questions about it or about my position. He was making speeches praising my record three years ago."

Jackson said O'Conor's tax program, including a graduated income tax, involved "promises to eat his cake and keep it at the same time."

Askes O'Conor Stand.

"He promises to spend more money and less money, depending upon the audience he is addressing," the mayor asserted.

"Mr. O'Conor, instead of asking questions, should be answering questions. He says he will cut $750,000 from the State appropriations, but he doesn't say what appropriations. Will he reduce the school appropriations? Will he reduce the appropriations for the health department?

"Let Mr. O'Conor stop trying to fool or mislead the taxpayers and get down to brass tacks. Let him tell us just what he proposes to do, if he really knows."

Factories Blamed For Pollution of Upper Potomac

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 1 (AP).—State Conservation Commission officials today placed responsibility for pollution of the upper Potomac River, and the resultant destruction of thousands of fish, on the City of Cumberland and adjacent industrial plants.

Cumberland, he said, was the only large city in Maryland not operating a sewage disposal plant, and its sewage is dumped into the Potomac to mix with the acids of the industrial plants.

Commenting on reports from sportsmen and Allegany County game wardens that hundreds of dead fish were being found daily in the river, Frank Bentz, chief clerk of the commission, said acids and other toxic refuse were chiefly responsible.

2,000 Truck Drivers Strike At Baltimore

Police Escorts Provided Interurban Fleet; 30 Firms Hit.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 1.—An estimated 2,000 truck drivers were on strike tonight with the operations of virtually all major trucking firms here affected.

Police escorts were provided during the day to truckers for their continued action. One fleet of eight trucks were escorted to the city line where they were met by State police who escorted them to Washington. About 500 trucks were affected from over 30 companies, operators estimated.

There were no disorders in the strike called at midnight yesterday following expiration of the contract between the Maryland Motor Truck Association, Inc., and the Freight Drivers and Helpers Union, Local 557, of the A. F. of L.

Harry Cohen, business agent of the union who was paroled by Gov. Nice in July after serving most of a three-month sentence for inciting to riot after a taxicab strike in December, 1936, appeared late today before Parole Commissioner J. Cookman Boyd to promise no violence of "any kind would be tolerated."

Union officials, in negotiating for a new contract, sought wage increases, they said today, on the basis of a verbal understanding reached when the previous contract was signed.

The operators countered with a proposal for a 10 per cent reduction for all classes of labor.

Wind, Rainstorm Hit Md. Orchards

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Sept. 1.—Farmers and fruit growers estimated the damage from last night's wind and rainstorm in the thousands of dollars. Hundreds of trees were uprooted, corn flattened and a number of telephone poles were blown down. The heaviest loss was sustained by apple growers. The home of Jesse Kendall, along South Mountain above Smithsburg, was struck by lightning and fired.

Trolley service between Hagerstown and Williamsport was terminated for a time when a large tree was blown across the car tracks. Trees and poles blocked the Smithsburg-Camp Ritchie highway until this morning.

Tax Analyst Named.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 7 (AP).—Dr. John Russell assumed office today as director of research for the State department of taxation. He succeeds Dr. W. H. Stauffer, who was appointed commisioner of public welfare.

Maryland Road Is 'Rebuilt' for Roosevelt Trip

Highway Board Intent on Pushing $30,000,000 State Program.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 1.—Regardless of whether President Roosevelt has any plans to talk politics in his tour of Maryland this week-end, Maryland's State roads commission intends to talk busness with him.

So intent is the commission on furthering its $30,000,000 bridge construction program—the study of which is one of the President's announced objectives—that it practically rebuilt one of the roads the Roosevelt entourage must use on the inspection tour.

Chairman J. Glenn Beall and Chief Engineer Nathan L. Smith will represent the roads commission, when, with Gov. Harry W. Nice, they show the Chief Executive plans for a Potomac River bridge near Morgantown in Southern Maryland.

To reach the Maryland end of the proposed bridge, the group must travel a short distance from Morgantown to the Matthews Farm, Beall said. The county road into the farm has been graded and otherwise improved this week in anticipation of the visit, he disclosed.

"We intend to talk facts with the President," Chairman Beall asserted. "We shall try to convince him that this bridge program is really a national program. More than 70 per cent of all the traffic into Washington goes through Maryland.

"When we ask for $17,000,000 (the amount being sought by the commission from the Public Works Administration), we're not asking it for the State alone—we're asking for the Nation as well."

The Southern Maryland bridge is one of four contemplated in the program designed to provide direct routes through the State.

President Roosevelt will view the site and confer with the commission Sunday. Monday morning, he will land at Crisfield from his yacht and tour up the Eastern Shore for a Labor Da yaddress at Denton.

Denton Bedecks Self.

Denton, Md., Sept. 1 (AP).—The unprecedented visit of President Roosevelt on Labor Day to this small town brought unusual activity here tonight as crews of decorators bedecked streets and buildings with bunting and lights.

Waynesboro Schools Open; 2,000 Enrolled

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 1.—Public schools opened here today with an enrollment in excess of 2,000 pupils. Opening earlier than usual, the 1938-1939 term will be in session until late in May next year. Proceeding the opening of schools, more than 100 members of the school personnel attended a teachers' banquet at the Anthony Wayne Hotel last night.

New members of the personnel introduced included Walter C. Richter, superintendent; Paul E. Shull, principal of the senior high school; Miss Eleanor Miller, Miss Dorothy Long, Donald Witter, Paul M. Bechtel, Vance Laubach, Mrs. Iva K. Porter and Miss Lillian Good. Walter Y. Grove, president of the board of education, presided a the dinner as toastmaster.

Librarian Resigns.

Waynesboro, Va., Sept. 1.—Mrs. J. Herbert Waite, librarian at the Waynesboro Public Library for the past nine years, today submitted her resignation. Poor health was assigned as the cause. Capt. E. P. Childs, chairman of the board, said Mrs. R. G. Wright, assistant librarian, would be promoted to the vacancy.

PWA Grants $250,695 for 4 Md. Projects

Cecil County, Easton and Hagerstown Benefit in Allotments.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 1.—Public Works Administration officials announced today approved by Washington PWA authorities of the Federal agency's participation in financing four Maryland construction projects which will cost an estimated $557,000.

Largest of the three was a project in Cecil County, involving erection of school buildings and addition and alterations to an existing school building. The PWA approved an outright grant of $162,495 for the work, estimated to cost $361,000.

New schools at Chesapeake City and Cecilton and additions and alterations to the Perryville High School and the Perryville Elementary School are contemplated under the grant.

A second grant, of $47,250, is dedicated to construction of a new $105,000 sewage disposal plant at Easton, including a sewage treatment plant, force mains and outfall sewer, and conversion of the present plant into a pumping station

The third grant, of $16,200, was allocated for erection of a new firehouse in the south section of Hagerstown, costing an estimated $36,000. Hagerstown's four firehouses now serve the northern and central sections of the city, but engines answering calls in the south must travel great distances, the PWA announcement said.

A fourth grant of $24,750 went to Hyattsville for construction of a new $57,000 garbage and refuse incinerator plant.

Light Apple Crop Being Harvested In Virginia Area

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 1.—Harvest of the 1938 crop of the famous Albemarle Pippins in Albemarle, Nelson and Augusta Counties, though light, is now in full swing, fully ten days ahead of normal picking and packing season. Ordinarily the pippin harvest begins on Labor Day.

The pippin crop in Augusta is reported as unusually light.

Harvest of Winesaps and other main crop varieties is expected to get under way in the tri-county area about September 20. Growers in Albemarle and Nelson report an unusually large percentage of inferior apples in early varieties, principally worm damage.

Virginia Guard Ranks Get U. S. Recognition

The War Department has announced recognition of the rank of a Virginia National Guard officer as valid in the National Guard of the United States.

The recognition, which followed fitness tests by boards of regular Army and National Guard officers, gave those recognized the dual status of commissioned officers in the military force of their State and officers of the United States National Guard.

Harding Renamed Waynesboro Head

Waynesboro, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—Alonza R. Harding was re-elected mayor of Waynesboro for a two-year term at an organization meeting of the municipal council today.

The council also reappointed City Manager I. G. Vass, City Attorney W. E. Moore, Commissioner of Revenue J. E. Drumwheller, and Finance Committee Chairman A. Vastine Coyner.

L. Brown Deputy was again named to the school board for a three-year term and Miss Kate Collins was returned to the library board for a five-year term. Dr. C. C. Bowman succeeded Louis Spilman as councilman.

Pi Kappa Alpha Names Dr. Hart as President

Richmond, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—Dr. Freeman H. Hart, professor of history and government at Hampden-Sydney College, today headed the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity which was founded at the University of Virginia soon after the Civil War.

He was elected national president of the organization at the closing session of the biennial convention at Los Angeles yesterday.

Fleet

where a war crisis impends. The order is effective Tuesday.

So great, in fact, was their unwillingness to discuss the matter that they refused either to confirm or deny they had received orders to refrain from comment or to indicate from which ports the squadron would operate.

Their only statement was that the new fleet unit had been formed of 14 new ships already on the coast which are in service or about to be completed "in preparation for Fleet Problem XX and to visit such parts as are designated."

At the State Department equal secretiveness was observed and all requests for comment were referred to the Navy.

Discussing the difficulties in the transmission of electric power between American urban districts, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, also a member of the plan-drafting committee, stated that because of bad business conditions power companies were "about three years behind their normal growth." He added that the committee intends to co-operate with private utilities that are behind and see if this situation of extreme importance to the Army and Navy cannot be rectified."

Johnson declared the proposed power study was in line with his theory of national defense which is "to make America so strong that no foreign nation will bother us."

Explaining that the committee will seek to outline a plan to make maximum power resources available the moment war is declared, he said that so-called "bottle-necks" in the network will be eliminated so the production of essential war materials will not be hampered.

15 Cities Affected.

Although all phases of the domestic power situation will be taken up, the principal emphasis will be given to the moblization of electrical resources for use in national defense, he declared.

Co-ordination of power facilities will affect at least 15 cities which military experts regard as strategic manufacturing centers, he continued, explaining that the Government wants assurance that these focal points will be able to draw upon each other for power at all times during an emergency in order to prevent interruption of war material production.

Throwing up his hands, Johnson smilingly declined to say whether the program was designed to apply to border cities that obtain power from Canada and which, under terms of the neutrality act, might be cut off during international hostilities. Such questions, he remarked, were "State Department affairs, not Army and Navy."

He declared that other nations know about existing "bottlenecks" in American power transmission and said his committee hoped to prepare a plan "to take out these bottlenecks and let the other fellows know about it."

As an example he remarked that power cannot be transmitted from Washington and Baltimore to Philadelphia or from the New Jersey side of the Hudson to the municipalities on the New York bank.

Plans Kept Secret.

Despite the fact that no battleships have been ordered to the East Coast as part of the new Atlantic Squadron, it is believed that the action may foreshadow a gradual concentration of the American naval forces in the Atlantic prior to January, as originally planned. It is also contended in some quarters that the creation of the unit at this time is a direct outgrowth of President Roosevelt's Kingston speech and the growing tension in Europe.

Furthermore, the intention to organize the squadron was known to a very limited number of high Government officials until less than two days ago. Navy Department officials usually conversant with such matters were kept completely in the dark until the announcement was made last night.

Foreign diplomatic observers also saw a strong political motive behind formation of the Atlantic Squadron. They said it tended to lend some support to Great Britain's efforts toward peaceful solution of the German-Czech crisis. It was pointed out that "it might be more than a coincidence" that the fleet will be established officially one day after Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler is scheduled to address the Nazi Congress in Nuremberg. Hitler's speech may mean the difference between peace and war for Europe and the world.

Todd to Command.

On Tuesday the cruisers Philadelphia, Brooklyn and Savannah, and the destroyers Mugford, Ralph Talbot, Helm, Shaw, Somers and Warrington will join the squadron to be commanded by Rear Admiral Forde A. Todd, former commandant of midshipmen at the Naval Academy, who is now in command of Cruiser Division 8.

Ships to join after completing shakedown cruises are the cruisers Nashville, Boise, Honolulu and Phoenix and the destroyer Sampson.

The cruisers are all of the 10,000-ton class and are armed with 6-inch guns. The destroyers Mugford, Somers and Sampson are flotilla leaders of 1,850 tons and the other destroyers are 1,500-ton craft.

In addition to the new squadron, the Navy has three of its older battleships, a demilitarized battleship, two new aircraft carriers and 16 older destroyers on the Atlantic Coast. Most of these were employed this summer in training cruises for midshipmen and naval reservists.

Other members of the power-planning committee announced yesterday will be Frederic A. Delano, vice chairman of the National Resources Committee and chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and Basil Manly, of the Federal Power Commission. Several more will be named later.

Dixie Davis Squirms, Recalls Rendezvous With Dare Girl

admit very readily to a habit of perjury in courtrooms, but the disbarred lawyer insisted he was telling the truth in the present trial. While counsel for the Schultz gang, he said, he often testified "in fear of his life." His conscience bothered him often—particularly when taking mobsters to the home of his mother—but he saw no way at the time to break off the lucrative association with Dutch Schultz and the policy racket.

As to his visits to Hope Dare, he said, detectives never left him alone with her. He visited her eight or ten times, he said, while lodged in the Tombs, but only to eat and to change his clothes.

Squirms and Redens.

[The dapper erstwhile kid mouthpiece" of the Schultz mob, squirming and reddening under Stryker's search into his private life, protested that while he was a married man he had not lived with his wife for three years, the Associated Press said.

[Davis insisted that during the visits to Miss Dare's apartment he was never alone in the same room with her.

["Detectives were always present," he said.

[Besides detectives, he said, Miss Dare's mother was always present when he stopped at her apartment to change his clothes.

["Did her mother always know when you were coming so as to be there to chaperone these visits?" asked Stryker.

["Her mother hardly ever left the place. She is a stranger in New York and she wouldn't go out unless she went with Hope."

["Oh?' said Stryker. "Well, let's see. Was Miss Dare always fully attired in the presence of police?"

Shows News Pictures.

["Was she ever in negligee at any time when you had your outer shirt off, just your undershirt?"

["She may have worn a morning gown," Davis snapped. "She was not in negligee.

["And you just in your undershirt."

["And my pants on," Davis amended firmly.

[With a flourish, Stryker then exhibited an enlarged newspaper photograph of a scantily-clad man and woman standing close together at the window of an apartment.

["Is that a picture of you and someone else?" asked Stryker. He handed the photograph to Davis.

[The witness studied it with a grimace. "I really can't tell, sir," he said. "I am sure I don't have that stomach. I don't know—it might be—it is very indistinct."

["Indistinct or not," Stryker snapped, "can you recognize who it is?"

["It is very indistinct." Davis repeated feebly. "I couldn't recognize either Hope or myself."—Editor's Note.]

Stryker did not question the witness about the main content of his story, accusing Hines. There was no mention during the cross-examination of Davis' testimony to paying Hines money, visiting him in his home, taking him to Bridgeport to see Schultz, conspiring with him to get gangsters freed by magistrates, about the Schultz gang's purported share in the election of District Attorney Dodge by contributing funds and stuffing ballot boxes, nor about Hines' alleged use of Max D. Steuer to try to get Dutch Schultz' income tax case compounded.

The counsel for the defense confined himself principally to the disreputability of the witness, which Dewey himself brought out in direct examination, and to the circumstances surrounding Davis' decision to turn State's evidence.

Stryker accused the witness of demurring to his indictment so he could come into court in midJuly with Hines in the hope of "entrapping him." Davis glared scornfully at defense counsel for a full minute before replying, roundly: "No, sir."

The day brought the largest crowd, storming at the door of the courtroom, that has yet appeared. When the afternoon session opened at 2:08, a milling collection of men and women were jostling with the police at the entrance, and so many standees leaked through the guard that Justice Pecora was forced to clear them out to adhere to his rule of limiting onlookers to the seating capacity of the court.

Maj. Brooke Denies Killing of His Wife

Macon, Ga., Sept. 1 (AP).—Maj. John R. Brooke, jr., U. S. Infantry, accused of killing his wife, denied today he had any part in her slaying.

Brooke made the denial at a hearing before Federal Judge Bascom S. Deaver on a motion by Brooke's counsel alleging military police obtained evidence illegally in the case.

The motion asked that the evidence be suppressed. Judge Deaver continued the hearing until Monday in Columbus, when Brooke is to face trial.

Maj. Brooke, son of Col. William Brooke, is a native of San Antonio, Tex. Mrs. Brooke, his second wife, was an Army nurse, native of Fon Du Lac, Wis.

Cardenas Says He'll Continue Seizing Lands

order to reach an agreement on the amount of indemnification, the United Press said.

[The President declared "other nations" had expropriated without indemnification by abandoning the gold standard, an obvious reference to President Roosevelt's action in reducing the gold content of the dollar.—Editor's note.]

Assails Oil Companies.

Involved in the expropriations are an estimated 1,000,000 acres taken over by the government since 1927. They represent for the most part moderate-sized farms valued by their owners at $10,132,388.

The 17 British and American oil companies taken over by the government March 18 were not mentioned in Hull's two notes, but the officials of the expropriated industry have watched the land controversy for a clew to their future.

Expropriation of the industry, which the owners value at $400,000,000, was necessitated by their "rebellious attitude" and the "pressure on the government," Cardenas asserted.

He said Mexican law gave Mexico all mineral products below the surface of the earth and that the government "does not feel obligated to pay them anything but the bare amount of their investments, less depreciation."

A bill will be presented Congress to prevent long-term concessions in the future to prevent another situation like that involving the oil companies, Cardenas said.

The President told Congress he broke off diplomatic relations with Great Britain because the latter demanded special privileges to its nationals and immediate payment for the Aguila Oil Co., one of those expropriated.

He said that, after all, Aguila—a Royal Dutch Shell subsidiary owned chiefly by English and Netherlands stockholders—was a Mexican company incorporated under Mexican law.

Speech Studied Here.

By the Associated Press.

Officials studied press reports of President Cardenas' speech to the Mexican Congress yesterday refusing Secretary Hull's request that Mexico cease expropriation of American agrarian lands.

They awaited an official text before commenting.

Cardenas' statement Mexico would not pay for more than the original investment of the oil companies does not differ materially from a statement made by a spokesman for President Roosevelt while at Warm Springs, Ga., this spring that this Government would not press for more than the original investment made by the companies, less depreciation.

The Mexican note of reply to Hull is expected here within a few days.

Welfare Charles I. Engard said, however, that the intensity of the heat, with radiators on full, would be tested with instruments.

Two convicts, survivors of the "heat treatment," retold at the inquest their stories of red-hot cells in which men gasped for breath, stepped on one another's faces, pleaded for mercy, and called deliriously for wives and mothers.

The witnesses, Joseph Forte and Maurice Spatz, virtually reiterated testimony given at a hearing of two guards on homicide charges.

Labor

gotiation when strikes involve at the outset enough workers to make a continued operation of the plant impractical.

The statutory immunity of trade unions from suits for acts done in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute is denied only in the case of illegal strikes or lockouts.

Peaceful picketing is permitted, but mass picketing is banned.

Trade unions may not contribute union funds for political purposes without written permission of the members.

Policemen and "established civil servants" may not belong to labor unions outside the civil service.

Registration of trade unions is voluntary, and by the end of 1935 less than half the trade unions had done so. However, these contained three-fourths of the union members of the realm.

There was complete agreement that the English general strike of 1926 was a salutary lesson and that it was generally believed there will be no repetition.

Closed-shop agreements are exceptional, except among seamen and firemen in the shipping industry.

Many workers and employers said that social legislation enacted in the present century had improved conditions and created an atmosphere in which harmonious employer and worker relations could be developed.

Unions Accepted.

One of the most striking features of the report was the evident stability of trade unionism in Great Britain, its general acceptance by employers and the public, and the resulting lack of either violence or provocation.

Reasons for this most marked difference in English labor troubles from those in this country included, the report said, the fact that in strongly organized industries it is difficult to obtain replacements, but that even where organization is not extensive "there is a general feeling among workers and employers that the job belongs to the man and that it is not right for men to take or be asked to take the jobs of their fellows."

Further, with the complete acceptance of the collective bargaining principle, "there is confidence on both sides that the controversy will be settled by peaceful negotiations, and a desire on both sides to effect a resumption of work under circumstances as free from bitterness as possible so that future strife may be avoided."

From this situation stems the lack of heavy picketing and the absence of the American custom of importing strikebreakers. Under an English law permissible picketing is defined as the peaceful persuasion of any person to work or abstain from working, provided that pickets "do not so attend in such number or otherwise in such manner as to be calculated to intimidate any person in such house or place, or to obstruct the approach thereto or egress therefrom, or to lead to a breach of the peace."

Under a further definition of the words "to intimidate," Parliament said that this meant "to cause in the mind of a person a reasonable apprehension of injury to him or to any member of his family or to any of his dependents, or of violence or damage to any person or property."

Trade unions in Great Britain, the report shows, are prohibited from incorporation, but are permitted voluntary registration. The benefits of registration are limited exemption from taxation of benefit funds, ability to carry on affairs through a continuing board of trustees, and immunity from legal suits except under specified conditions, where-under the community peace is threatened.

At the end of 1936 there were in Great Britain and Ireland 1,041 trade unions, with a stated membership of 5,206,000, representing about one-third of all workers eligible for membership. Most unions are affiliated in the Trades Union Congress.

On the other side, employers associations are equally extensive, corresponding directly to unionization. At the end of 1936 there were 266 general federations of employers designed to cover whole industries and services, dealing exclusively with labor matters. There were also 1,550 local and district associations of this type, most affiliated with the large federations, and most of the total affiliated with the National Confederation of Employers Organizations.

Despite great diversity of individual agreements, the system appears to work in this fashion everywhere that unions are strongly organized. Where organization is weak, the report explained, trade boards are established, which set wages and hours for the very lowest classes.

Basic changes in wages and hours are almost invariably negotiated by national unions with national employers associations, seldom by local unions with the local employers.

The trade boards set up for unorganized industries correspond to the committees now being set up by the wage-hour division of the Labor Department, although this similarity was not noted by the report. They consist of representatives of labor, the public and the industry and have much the same powers.

Great Britain has no laws compelling union recognition, nor collective bargaining, and the government consistently maintains the principle of non-interference with voluntary agreements. The only time it steps in is in excessive low-wage industries with the trade boards, the report said, except of course in national emergencies or where all-lesser arbitration or mediation has failed to bring agreement.

Both labor and employer organizations, the report stated, have been "further strengthened by the frequent support and encouragement which they render to each other. Repeatedly employers and representatives of employers organizations stated to us that they preferred strong unions to weak ones, because the strong union is better able to secure the fulfillment of agreements and is better able to bring competitors up to the wage and hour standards of industry, as set by the agreements. Repeatedly labor representatives stated to us that they preferred strong employer organizations to weak ones, because the stronger the organization the fewer the units which remain outside to undermine industry standards."

The report concluded by noting: "Finally and most important, the acceptance and general practice of collective bargaining on an industry basis places upon the employers and workers organization, because of the sheer numbers of men and the magnitude of interests involved, a peculiarly heavy responsibility calculated by its very nature to call forth patience, understanding and a desire to make and keep agreements and to achieve industrial peace."

State to Take Over Schools In All Austria

Vienna

In future, the Jews of Vienna will have 14 grammar schools at their exclusive disposal. For their higher education, there will be only one school left, namely, the "Chajes-real gynasium" in Vienna which will admit about 480 pupils of both sexes. During the last school year 5,686 ewish ppuils went to high schools in Vienna.

Pupils of mixed Jewish and Aryan blood will be permitted to visit Aryan schools. No discrimination will be made in their case.

The practice differs from that in Berlin where Jews are permitted to operate automobiles, but Jewish owners are given license numbers above 385,000 to distinguish their cars.

7 Planes Qualify For Prize Events In National Races

Cleveland, Sept. 1 (AP).—Fighting the official timer's watch, racing pilots had qualified seven airplanes tonight for the big money events on the closed circuits of the National Air Races for the Labor Day week-end.

Speeds ranged from 214 to more than 280 miles an hour.

Three more planes qualified for the $25,000 Greve anent to be run on a 10-mile circuit for a distance of 200 miles on Sunday. The eseven were qualified for the $45,000 Thompson Trophy race for 300 miles on Monday.

These races carry America's richest purses in closed course air racing. The third big money classic is the Bendix Transcontinental, worth $30,000, on Saturday.

Lewis Defends New Deal Aims In Chevy Chase

helping to obtain PWA funds for Harford County. He added that if he found anything wrong he might rescind the funds and "raise hell generally." He explained that it was not necessary for communities to hire lawyers to secure funds, and recalled the incident of his rescinding California projects for which money had been secured by an attorney.

Ickes revealed that the bridge across the Potomac, the site of which the President will inspect over the week-end, has been the subject of a PWA application of "several million dollars" for several years. He clearly indicated that since several sites had been proposed, a bridge project was not receiving serious consideration from the PWA.

Asked if outcome of the primary would in any way affect the application, he replied that it would be considered "on its merits, the vote will have nothing to do with it."

Roosevelt Conservative.

Revealing that part of his speech which was not broadcast to a defense of the Roosevelt program, Lewis told his 400 hearers that "your children will read in their school books about the greatest conservatives of 1930-1940, who not only carried the Constitution safely through the Red Sea of Depression, saved society from possible wreckage, but also advanced some distance in protecting, in an adequate way, the right to work and the right to own honest property."

Pointing out that Montgomery County has never failed to support him, Lewis said that he felt it a duty of a Democratic Congressman to co-operate "with our great leader in the White House." He reiterated charges that Tydings "has been co-operating with the Republican leadership in the Senate."

Lewis stated that the President "has launched a great program in the United States."

United States Owes a "Chance."

"In my humble way," he said, "I tried to launch it 30 years ago, but if I succeeded at all it was in a disappointing, fractional way.

"We know the political rights," he declared, "may be worthless if their economic bases are deliberately withdrawn and destroyed. The world does not owe a man a living. I grant you, but if God lives," he explained, "it owes hi ma chance to make a living."

Lewis asserted that the Government of the United States extended help to the 12,000,000 unemployed in 1933," and why shouldn't it? Are governments organized except to protect lives and honest property of their citizens."

"Half Price of a Car."

To the criticism that Government under the Roosevelt Administration has increased national debt by $18,500,000,000, Lewis replied that if that sum is divided by the 50,000,000 Americans "who in normal times support themselves and who are the natural taxpayers of the United States, it comes to $330 apiece, half the price of a low-priced automobile."

He had said that large-scale Government financial undertakings usually run for 25 years. Therefore, he said, a payment of $1.58 per month by each of these taxpayers would pay off the whole debt plus 3 per cent interest in a quarter of a century.

"How many men and women of the United States would not be glad to pay $1.58 a month to be assured that their jobs will continue?"

He asserted it was "not radicalism to point to the fact that a few years ago 12,000,000 people were deprived of the opportunity to earn their bread."

Lewis was introduced by Mrs. Raymond Clapper and Bowie Waters co-chairman of the Montgomery County Lewis-for-Senator Club. Waters asserted that it was "an insult" to President Roosevelt for anyone to say he is an invader. He urged support for "that matchless man in the White House."

J. Bond Smith, Takoma Park Democratic leader, stated after Lewis had finished speaking that "if there is any invasion it is an invasion of Republicans into a Democratic primary." He said "you can still be a good organization man and support David J. Lewis."

Prince Georges To Allow Six To Withdraw

Elections Board Agrees to Action by Republican Candidates.

The six Republican candidates whose withdrawal from the primary race last week was questioned will not have to run, the Prince Georges County Board of Elections Supervisors decided at a meeting in Upper Marlboro yesterday.

The board formally accepted the withdrawal of the following candidates, whose names will be left off the ballot in the September 12 primary: Wesley Beall, of Ritchie, and Curtis Hopkins, of Hall's Station, for sheriff; Karl A. Young, of Mount Rainier, for county commissioner; Carlton Pyles, of Temple Hills, for House of Delegates, and Helen Cordoza, of Fairmont Heights, and Mitchell Swann, of Marlboro, for State central committee.

The question of whether the candidates had withdrawn in time came before the election board as the result of a law passed by the 1937 Legislature. The law requires candidates to withdraw 30 days ahead of the primary election, but opinions differed as to whether it applied to the entire State or only to the City of Baltimore, where voting machines are used.

George Burroughs, attorney to the county election board, said Attorney Generla Herbert R. O'Conor had declined to rule on the question.

Sasscer Urges Tobacco Price Investigation

Candidate for Governor Intimates Monopoly Lowers Market.

Leonardtown, Md. Sept. 1.—An investigation of a "monopolistic price," which drops the Maryland market, was advocated tonight by State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, gubernatorial candidate from Prince Georges County.

Addressing a "Sasscer-for-Governor" rally here, Sasscer pointed out that Maryland farmers are faced with the perplexing problem of how to dispose "of one of the best tobacco crops in years without practically giving it away, as they are doing with the 1937 crop."

"Our tobacco prices," he said, "on the present market are at least 25 to 50 per cent lower than those in 1937 . . . The gradual decline to levels below the cost of production has threatened our farmers with the loss of their life savings. . . .

"A Governor who has the real interest of the tobacco grower at heart can do a great deal. He can take steps to re-establish our foreign markets, lost in recent years to the southern Maryland tobacco industry. He can initiate a movement through the Maryland extension service and the National Agricultural Department for an investigation of a monopolistic price affecting the system that causes a decline in our markets year after year, while the consumption of cigarettes are on the increase by the billions."

Hitler Rejects A Czech Truce, Nazis Report

racy, the Czechoslovak plan advanced was said to call for governmental changes in Czechoslovakia to a canton system, similar to Switzerland's, thus attempting to satisfy Sudeten German autonomy demands with authority divided between cantons and a federal government responsible for defense and foreign affairs.

The meeting recalled the fateful talk Kurt von Schuschnigg, then chancellor of Austria, had with Hitler in the same Bavarian home just before the German army marched into Austria and that nation was annexed by Germany March 13.

Two preceding schemes offered by Czechoslovakia to meet the demands of the Sudeten Germans, a minority of 3,500,000, for autonomy had been rejected.

Henlein arrived shortly after 1 p. m. and the conference which began soon afterward lasted until 5 p. m.

Goering, Goebbles and Hess then left, Goering and his wife taking a special train for Berlin.

Press Fire Halted.

Hitler's next task is the preparation of a series of speeches he will deliver at the annual Nazi party congress beginning Monday in Nurnberg.

The congress will open formally Tuesday when his annual proclamation to the Nazi party, in which he customarily reviews Nazi achievements of the past and sounds future keynotes, will be read.

The sharp editorial fire against Czechoslovakia was halted today but the public was informed amply of the alleged shooting at a German customs guard by Czechoslovak border guards near Oelsen, Saxony. Foreign office quarters said a protest was being considered. The German was uninjured.

Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz, foreign office mouthpiece, confined itself to a historical account of what it called Czechoslovak efforts to suppress other nationalities.

'Flag-Salute' Case Principal Resigns In Prince Georges

Principal William T. Jobe, who ordered explusion of the Ludke children from the Oxon Hill Consolidated School in Prince Georges County's "flag-salute" case two years ago, has resigned his post, it was announced yesterday by School Superintendent Nicholas Orem.

Jobe, in a letter to the superintendent, said he was resigning "for a better job."

The six children of August A. Ludke, of Silver Hill, were banned from the Oxon Hill school because they refused to salute the American flag in classroom exercises. They claimed their refusal was based on religious tenets. They are members of the Jehovah's Witness sect.

Thomas S. Gwynn, jr., of Clinton, has been named Jobe's successor. Gwynn, assistant principal at the Upper Marlboro high school for the past five years, obtained his master's degree last June at the University of Maryland in school administration.

U.S. May Examine Dr. Griebl in Berlin

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—A commission will take testimony in Berlin from Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl, fugitive under indictment on espionage charges, if the former Army Medical Reserve Officer will consent.

Dr. Griebl, regarded as a key figure in the Government's biggest spy investigation since the World War, fled to Germany just before he was indicted. Federal Judge Murray Hulbert today granted a motion for a commission to examine Dr. Griebl provided Griebl agrees in writing. The motion was made on behalf of Johanna Hofmann, former hairdresser on the liner Europa and also named in the indictment.

Increase Shown In Construction For Arlington

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0509

Building permits issued in Arlington County last month showed a marked increase over August, 1937, and sharp increase over the previous month. A total of 197 building permits were issued last month for a total value of $824,968.

These were divided as follows: 126 dwellings, $728,340; two apartments, $38,000; church, $10,000; three business buildings, $20,000; 44 alterations, 25,928, and 10 garages, $2,700.

The July report this year showed that 109 permits, with a total valuation of $543,825 were issued and in August, 1937 124 permits, with a value of $774,225, were issued.

Smoking and eating while driving were listed as "fine ways to hear the rustle of the angels' wings" by Dr. R. G. Beachley, Arlington health officer, in a warning to Labor Day motorists yesterday. Both may cause the driver to lose control for a moment, the health officer said. He put one-arm driving in the same category, stating: "One-arm driving has been the subject of countless sensible, but totally useless warnings."

Dr. Beachley also issued a warning to parents that under the State law all children entering school for the first time this year must be vaccinated against smallpox before they will be allowed to attend school. The protection by a successful vaccination lasts about seven years. Children who have not been vaccinated for seven years should undergo a revaccination, he said.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST, P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

The third annual fair of the Lee District Improvement Association will be held today in the Burke School, beginning at 2 p. m.

A baby contest at 3 p. m. will be opened to children from 1 to 3 years old. Other features include beauty contests for both women and men and a pie-eating contest.

The exhibits will include 20 classes of flowers, 26 classes of vegetables, 17 classes of farm products and 26 classes of handicraft. A sweepstakes prizes will be awarded the winner in each group.

All residents of Lee District and members of the association are eligible to enter exhibits and no fee is charged for entries. Entries must be in place by 11 a. m., when judging will begin and must remain until 10 p. m. All entries must be produced by exhibitors.

The board of the Falls Church Community Theater held its first meeting at the home of President Paul Ferris this week to start plans for the year's activities, prior to the departure of the treasurer, Raymond Soderberg, on a six weeks' trip to Europe. Plans were made to open the membership campaign immediately and the chairman, Mrs. J. H. Chambliss, will appoint a committee to assist her in enrolling old and new members.

It was decided to suggest to the group that the regular meeting be changed from the second Monday, owing to conflict with the town council's regular meeting. The September meeting will be held on the third Monday, to provide time for selection and rehearsal of an original one-act play. The creative writing group, Arthur Lamar, chairman, has received several plays by members which will be presented during the year.

The first meeting of the Fairfax County Chapter, D. A. R., will be held Friday afternoon in Arlington at the home of the new regent, Mrs. William C. Welburn.

Rapid progress is being made on the new parish hall of Crossman M. E. Church. The work is being done by young people of the church, mostly at night. The building will measure 30 by 50 feet and will include one large room 30 by 40 feet, a kitchen and two rest rooms.

Superintendent Sherman Wells has postponed the meeting of the Sunday School Board, which will fall on Labor Day.

Preparations are being made for the first quarterly conference to be held September 11 immediately following church service, when Dr. Ellis Williams, of Washington, will preach.

Villa Maria Academy in West Falls Church will open Tuesday. The St. James Parochial School opens Thursday, the same day on which the public schools start. The meeting of the St. James P.-T. A. will be postponed until September 13.

W. Va. Tomato Festival Opens Tomorrow at Berkeley Springs

Coronation of Washington Girl as 'Queen Morgan' to Be Highlight of 3-Day Program; Gov. Holt to Officiate at Ceremony.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Sept. 1. Officials of the Tomato Festival organization announced today that except for a few minor details all was in readiness for the celebration which will be held here this week-end, September 3, 4 and 5.

The spirit of festivity has been apparent since the beginning of the week and as the week-end nears is growing in intensity. A great carnival has been in progress since Monday night and hundreds of persons have been attending the midway nightly. Already the town is rapidly becoming a blaze of color as gayly colored flags decorate the front of scores of business places and homes.

Gov. Homer Holt, Representative Jennings Randolph, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Harry L. Brown and the mayors of a half dozen nearby cities are a few of the notable persons expected to visit Berkeley Springs during the Tomato Festival.

Saturday.

9 a. m.—Tour of Morgan County tomato fields. Visitors invited.

9:30 a. m.—Six-mile bicycle race on Winchester road. Finish at the intersection of Gill Park and Washington street.

11 a. m.—Band concert by Waynesboro Public School Band in the Berkeley Springs Park.

2:30 p. m.—The coronation of Queen Morgan II, Gov. Homer A. Holt officiating.

3:30 p. m.—Pageant depicting the elements entering into the growth of the tomato. The pageant, having hundreds of local characters, was written by George Barker, of Great Cacapon, and sponsored by the local chapter of the N. S. D. A. R.

6:30 p. m.—Band concert at the coronation pavilion in the Berkeley Springs Park by the Waynesboro Public School Band.

9 p. m.—Reception for Queen Morgan and her court, sponsored by the Morgan County Women's Club, at Park View Inn.

Sunday.

11 a. m.—Church service at St. Mark's Episcopal Church for Queen Morgan II and her court.

1:30 p. m.—Band concert by the Harrisonburg Boys Band.

2:15 p. m.—Public speaking by Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Harry L. Brown and Representative Jennings Randolph.

5:30 p. m.—Band concert.

7:30 p. m.—Candlelight vesper and choral service on Pendle Hill. The service, sponsored by the ministers of Morgan County, will be directed by Sara B. Huff, of New York City.

Monday.

10 a. m.—Baseball game between Cherry Run (undefeated) and Hose Company No. 4, of Martinsburg, W. Va., at the high school athletic field.

10 a. m.—String music contest at the coronation pavilion in the Berkeley Springs Park.

11:30 a. m.—Baby show. Winners will be selected in four classes and merchandise and cash awards be made. To be held at the coronation platform in the Berkeley Springs Park.

12:30 p. m.—Ceremony awarding trophy and cash prizes to tomato growers exhibiting the best tomatoes during the second annual Tomato Festival. Conducted by H. C. C. Willey, county agent.

4 p. m.—Drum corps drill and competition. South Washington street.

9:30 p. m.—Queen's Ball at Park View Inn.

Character Building Called Schools' Aim

Gettysburg, Pa., Sept. 1.—"Character building will continue to be the highest and ultimate aim of education," declared Dr. Lester K. Ade, Pennsylvania's superintendent of public instruction, in an address before the eighty-second annual session of the Adams County teachers institute this afternoon in the Gettysburg High School Auditorium.

Dr. T. D. Martin, Washington, D. C., director of membership for the National Education Association, is on the roster of speakers for Friday.

5 Safe After Drifting In Crippled Bay Boat

Baltimore, Sept. 1 (AP).—Five young men returned safely today to their homes at Deal, Md., after being objects of widespread search when the motor of their boat failed in the Chesapeake Bay off North Beach Point.

Patrolman J. Bruce Lyon, of North Beach, said one of the party, Edward Deal, waded ashore across mud flats after the motor failed. Several hours later others in the boat got the motor started and proceeded to Deals.

6 Councilmen Are Sworn In At Alexandria

Delaney Is Only New Member; Will Assume Duties Sept. 13.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU, 207 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Temple 2787. Delivery Service, phone Alex. 1468.

Six members of the city council, elected on June 14, were sworn in yesterday before the clerk of the corporation court, Elliott F. Hoffman. They will automaticaly assume duties of their office at the first meeting of the council, September 13.

Of this group, Delaney is the only new member, the other five being re-elected. Delaney succeeds Judge Louis C. Barley, who moved into Fairfax County.

Other members of the council who have another year to serve are known as councilmen-at-large. They are Mayor Richard L. Ruffner, Vice Mayor William T. Wilkins and A. Slater Lamond.

Albert Doran, newly appointed director of athletics at the George Mason High School, yesterday assumed his duties by starting a squad of 40 at football practice. In addition to his duties as athletic director, Doran will supervise all boys' physical education classes.

The new director, a university graduate, has been athletic director and member of the faculty of the Robert E. Lee High School at Staunton, Va. He will be assisted by Willis Benner, of the University of Maryland.

Va. Goat Raiser Advances Claim To Tatting Title

New Canton, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—The tatting men of the Iowa tall-corn country better look again at their bedspreads and doilies.

J. Franklin Wilson, goat farm operator, has challenged the fame of Walter H. Mueller, Des Moines furrier, who won the tatting sweepstakes of the Iowa State Fair with a bedspread which cost $25 and required 600 hours.

"My wife," countered Mr. Wilson, "has a tatted bedspreaad that I made for her. It cost $14.20 for thread and took 1,080 hours to make (three years of tatting)."

Furthermore, the Virginian, who raises Nubian goats, has made numerous other "centerpieces, doilies and edging" for his wife—they are not for sale.

Labor Act Evils Stressed in Talk By Vandenberg

Offers 5-Point Program for Revision of Wagner Relations Act.

By the Associated Press.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 1.—Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, outlined tonight a five-point program for rewriting the Wagner labor relations act.

In an address prepared for delivery before Rotarians representing 44 western Michigan clubs, the Senator warned that unless wise and rational reconstruction of this general nature proceeds promptly * * * we shall have more civil war instead of more employment * * * we shall have more recession instead of more prosperity."

Revision of the act, Senator Vandenberg said, should be undertaken "with the constant purpose to leave intact every essential protection for labor's right to organize and bargain collectively through agents of its own choice without intimidation or coercion."

The principles he said should govern the rewriting of the act were:

To minimize either the necessity or the excuse for strikes but not to impair labor's right to strike.

To require that there shall be no coercion of employes through threats or intimidation from either labor or capital.

To make the process of election to determine bargaining agents reasonably accessible to any employer or any group of employes "which seeks it in good faith."

To require written contracts as the result of collective bargaining and to penalize their breach by either party.

To set up an administrative board "which shall be required to do equal justice to all citizens within the jurisdiction of the law and to pursue equitable rules of procedure in determining where justice lies.

Warning that "industry must uninterruptedly make a profit before it can share one," the Senator said that "labor itself will find itself finally drawn into the maelstrom of ever increasing Federal controls which will one day cost it all of its liberty and power."

The Wagner act, Vandenberg said, was passed "because we failed voluntarily to keep up with the times in equitable labor legislation" and he said 95 per cent of American business "suffered for the sins of the 5 per cent."

Silver on Committee.

Dr. Edwin H. Silver has been appointed to the executive committee of the Cosmopolitan Club to replace Dr. Fordyce A. H. Johnson, resigned, it was announced yesterday by J. L. B. Murray, president, at the weekly meeting of the organization. Fred Orsinger, director of the Bureau of Fisheries aquarium, was guest speaker.

U. S. Asked to Approve Gas Export to Mexico

The United Gas Corporation, Houston, Tex., asked the Power Commission yesterday for authority to continue the export of natural gas to Nuevo Laredo, Mexico.

The gas, distributed in Mexico by the Compania de Gas de Nuevo Laredo, South America, has been delivered across the border since 1922, and the Houston Corporation said unless license for export were continued the Mexican company would be without a source of supply.

Capitol Stalagmites Kept To Unobtrusive Height

Stalactites and stalagmites, caused by seepage of water through limestone—are found throughout the corridors of the Capitol's subway.

But they'll never rival those of the Virginia and Kentucky caves. Capitol employes regularly chip them from the floor and ceilings with chisels.

Retail Stores to Open All Day on Saturdays

Downtown retail stores will be open all day on Saturdays, beginning tomorrow, Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said yesterday.

The stores were closed all or part of the day every Saturday during July and August to permit employes to enjoy a longer week-end.

Cubans Ask Shelter After Gulf Hurricane

By the Associated Press.

Cuban Ambassador Pedro Martinez Fraga yesterday asked the Mexican consul at Corpus Christi, Tex., to care for the crew of the Cuban fishing boat Josefina, which took refuge there from the recent hurricane. Dr. Martinez Fraga sent the Mexican consul funds to provide the nine men with clothing, food and lodging for a week.

No Fight Made To Put PWA in Civil Service

Aides Indicate Exclusion Accepted as Final by Interior Department.

No effort is being made to find a loophole through which Public Works Administration employes can gain civil service status through application of the Executive order of June 24, it was made clear yesterday through the office of E. K. Burlew, first assistant Secretary of the Interior.

The Civil Service Commission has not advised the PWA Administrator, Secretary Ickes, on its intention of including or excluding the PWA workers; and in the absence of a statement from the Commission, the PWA authorities indicated that they could not see how the law might be interpreted to admit the employes to classified status.

The PWA, it was recalled, was created under the NIRA, and the act excluded the personnal from civil service purview.

Woolworth & Co. Sued For $35,000 After Fall

F. W. Woolworth & Co. was sued in District Court yesterday for $35,000 damages which Mrs. Emojean Haas, of 415 Fourth street northwest, charged she suffered after she fell down a flight of stairs in a Woolworth store in December, 1936.

Formerly a dietitian at the Bullis School, Silver Spring, Md., Mrs. Haas, 73 years old, now uses crutches and is injured permanently, according to her attorney.

Forger Is Using 'Phony' Bank for Bad Checks Here

Police yesterday warned business men against a 45-year-old man who may try to cash $50 checks on a non-existent banx.

The man, described as a "good talker," carries with him checks, printed to resemble travelers' checks, drawn on the Exchange National Bank of New York City, police were told.

Police received the man's description after he passed a check on a Potomac River boat. Officers of the steamship line found the bank did not exist.

Puerto Rico Rebel Guilty in Murder

Ponce, Puerto Rico, Sept. 1 (AP).—Elias Escobar, Puerto Rican Nationalist, was convicted today of murder for the killing of a National Guardsman in an attempt on the life of Gov. Blanton Winship. He will be sentenced tomorrow.

The jury asked clemency for Escobar, but he refused, insisting on his innocence. Life imprisonment would be the maximum penalty.

Runaway Boy, 11, Found in Boxcar; Won't Be Spanked

Less than an hour after the boy left home, his father, Emanuel Horowitz, found the message and asked police to locate him.

Late in the afternoon Laurel (Md.) police found Bernard hiding in a box car. His father brought the boy home. He said his son needed a bath and a good meal more than a spanking.

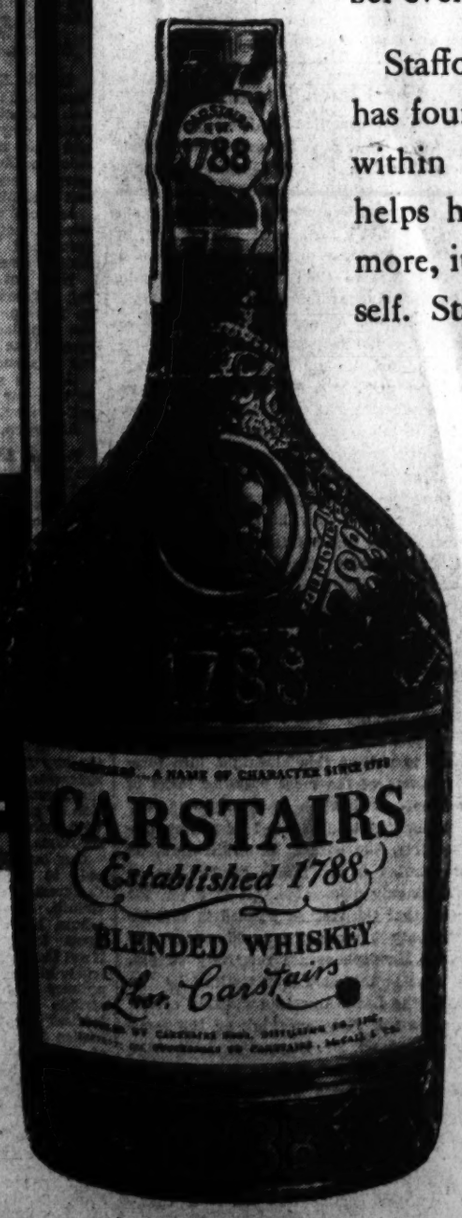
CARSTAIRS
created for "The Man who Cares"



Carstairs is a blend of several distinguished whiskies. It is 86.8 proof. The straight whiskies in this product are four years or more old. 57½% straight whiskey and 42½% other whiskey four years or more old. Carstairs Bros. Distilling Co., Inc., New York City, N. Y.

WHO IS "THE MAN WHO CARES"? Well, take your friend Ed Stafford, for example. You like to go to his house, for you know you will be well entertained. His cigars may not be the most expensive, but they will be good. His silverware may not be ornate, but it will be in excellent taste.

Whatever Ed serves in meat or drink you will enjoy with confidence and relish. You can't remember ever having had indigestion after a meal at Ed's.

Stafford is not a rich man, as you know. But he has found it is both pleasant and profitable to seek, within his means, the better things of living. It helps him in the opinion of others. And, what's more, it helps him in his own good opinion of himself. Stafford is a "man who cares".

Thomas Carstairs, so goes the family tradition, was a distinguished architect in Colonial days; a man of high attainments, and a gracious host, he became the friend of Washington, Jefferson and other notables; in 1788, Carstairs' talent for hospitality led him to open an establishment in Philadelphia, for purveying spirituous liquors to "men who cared".

Since Thomas Carstairs' time, generation after generation of his family have carried on his high traditions.

The Carstairs Whiskey at your neighborhood store or favorite bar today keeps faith with the time-honored Carstairs standards. A superbly balanced blend of fine whiskies, Carstairs is rich and full in flavor; yet exceptionally light in body. You may drink or serve it always with confidence and relish.

Senator Tydings' Revelation.

There is only one point which seems crystal clear in the rather vague allusion to the Supreme Court controversy made by Senator Tydings in his Hyattsville campaign address.

Mr. Tydings did not reveal who told him that there was a desire to secure the resignation of Chief Justice Hughes, nor who had that desire, nor who was defined as the man who could prevail on Mr. Hughes to resign. All in all, unless the Senator's speech was badly garbled in every local newspaper report, the references to the Chief Justice either should not have been made, or made much more definitely.

But what Senator Tydings did make plain is that he himself was entirely willing to compromise on the basic principle underlying the court-packing plan. He was willing to accept the bill, prior to Senator Robinson's death and the growth of popular resentment against it, provided only that the provisions were not made applicable to sitting members of the Court.

Why Mr. Tydings should imagine that this interesting revelation will help his cause is something of a mystery. His supposedly independent attitude in opposing the President on legislation calculated to undermine the independence of the judiciary has heretofore been one of his greatest campaign assets in Maryland. Now the Senator indicates that this opposition was not based on principle at all, and that only after the tide of popular opinion made it seem politically advantageous did he abandon a compromising attitude.

By the same token Senator Tydings' revelations help to arouse further wonder as to why the President feels it so vital to have him defeated. Perhaps, now that certain mysteries in the story of the Supreme Court bill are being half-revealed, Mr. Roosevelt will see fit to elucidate further on Maryland soil next week-end.

Hitler And The Church.

Shortly after Anschluss the Catholic hierarchy in Austria, headed by Cardinal Innitzer, issued a warm pledge of fealty to the Nazi regime and urged their flocks to vote "yes" in the then forthcoming plebiscite.

The evidence is now overwhelming that neither this gesture of acquiescence in the establishment of the Greater Reich, nor the provisions of the Vatican-Austrian concordat which Germany presumably assumed, have won the church any increased measure of tolerance from Hitler. On the contrary, the Nazi regime has recently shown a very cavalier attitude toward the Catholic Church, both in the old Reich and in what was formerly Austria.

Yesterday, it is reported, an order was issued closing all private schools, both religious and secular, in the Austrian area. Henceforth, it was explained, the state and the Nazi party would assume a monopoly over education. Seemingly applicable to schools of all faiths, this edict affects with particular force those of the Catholic Church, whose communicants outnumber those of all others in Austria.

The church in a totalitarian regime, be it German, Italian or the kind which Franco hopes to establish in Spain with the support of Hitler and Mussolini, can only function as a tool of that regime. There can be no real freedom of religion, or any other kind of intellectual freedom, in a nation where every consideration is subordinated to what a single party regards as the welfare of the state.

A Clean Potomac.

Washington's hopes for a clean Potomac move a considerable step toward realization with the appointment by the National Resources Committee of an engineer to promote co-operation between the District of Columbia and the four States washed by the river.

Flood control along the Potomac is a relatively easy matter. The Federal Government, through the Army engineers, has ample authority to dike the river beyond reasonable possibility of overflow. All that is lacking here is the money, a point deserving comment by reason of the vast sums appropriated for flood control in other sections of the country.

The problem of Potomac pollution, however, is complicated by the various authorities—Federal, State and local—involved. While all, presumably, are agreed on the desirability of restoring the venerable waterway to its pristine purity, none has been able to gear its efforts in that direction with those of its neighbors.

The NRC, organized regionally, is admirably equipped to overcome this difficulty. Satisfaction over its interest, however, must not obscure the fact that on Washington and the other communities and sovereignties concerned will fall the ultimate responsibility for implementing whatever plan will be devised. Although the Capital has already contributed considerably in the way of modern sewage disposal, much remains to be done.

Specifically, Rock Creek and the Anacostia River must be cleaned up. Fishermen of the area have already mobilized to push these problems. Their initiative deserves the active support of all citizens interested in clean swimming and boating, or merely in contemplaton of the finest of Washington's natural advantages.

British Industrial Relations.

The report of the commission appointed by the President to study industrial relations in Great Britain is purely factual. It expresses no opinions and makes no recommendations regarding the applicability of the findings to American conditions.

But Mr. Roosevelt has remedied what some might regard as a deficiency by his covering statement. To him, he says, the most salient feature of the report "is the co-operative spirit, coupled with restraint, which is shown by those who represent both employers and employes in Great Britain. Collective bargaining is an accepted fact and because of this the machinery which carries it out is functioning."

Those who are already familiar with British industrial relations, and those who obtain their first introduction to the subject from this carefully-prepared and admirably objective survey, will alike agree that the President has singled out "the most salient feature."

Instead of a spirit of class war, instead of vindictive hostility between employer and employe groups, the dominant desire is the furtherance of obviously mutual interests. To make this aim effective the British have developed, first, comprehensive organization of both management and labor, and, second, practical utilization of this organization in the solution of disputes.

As the report of the President's commission shows, this is no recent or mushroom development. Almost half a century ago, in 1889, a Government report on industrial unrest pointed out that British employers were even then concerned with prevention, rather than settlement, of industrial warfare. "These methods of arranging difficulties," it said, "have only been made possible by organization of the forces on both sides."

Five years later a royal commission on Labor concluded that strong organizations of employers and workers, dealing together through collective agreements and setting up machinery for conciliation and arbitration, afford the most practical approach to industrial peace. And in this inquiry of 1894 is found the very suggestive conclusion that:

> The most quarrelsome period of a trade's existence is when it is just emerging from the patriarchal condition in which each employer governs his establishment and deals with his own men with no outside interference, but has not yet fully entered into that other condition in which transactions take place between strong associations fully recognizing each other.

Well before the dawn of the Twentieth Century, therefore, British industry gave its blessing to unionism, not merely for ethical reasons but because intelligent analysis indicated that strong independent labor organization is a prerequisite to the maintenance of industrial peace. That the formula has worked is demonstrated by the current report of the President's commission, particularly the section which says that:

> Repeatedly employers and representatives of employers' organizations stated to us that they preferred strong unions to weak ones, because the strong union is better able to secure the fulfillment of agreements and is better able to bring competitors up to the wage and hour standards of the industry, as set by the agreements.

There is much profitable reading for the union-baiting American employer in this report. But there is also much in it which may be commended especially to labor circles. "Closed-shop agreements," says the report, "are exceptional and do not appear to be seriously sought for." In Great Britain the check-off device for compulsory unionism is similarly "very exceptional and several union representatives stated their opposition to it." In other words, employer recognition of the desirability of independent unionism is balanced by union recognition of the undesirability of coercion. The one is a reflex of the other.

A third lesson implicit in the report is directed to government. Because of the extensive machinery of negotiation developed by the employers' and workers' organizations many matters which are here being made subjects of legislation are worked out in Great Britain without state intervention.

The advantages of the British procedure, both in flexibility and in good will, are apparent. In fact the report presents ample evidence to indicate that without this co-operative approach by both partners to industry a democratic government can do little to further that industrial peace which is so vital to the welfare of modern society.

Next Step For The Railways.

It is much too soon to become pessimistic over the failure of the National Mediation Board to effect a settlement of the dispute over proposed railway wage cuts of 15 per cent. The chances for eventually reaching an amicable settlement are still far from hopeless.

Past experience indicates that when the only alternative to a compromise of opposing views is to call a strike and paralyze the Nation's transportation system wiser counsels are apt to prevail. The railway labor act, indeed, is based upon a well-founded belief that, given ample opportunity for discussion, and safeguards against precipitate action by either employers or employes, a way will be found to avoid open conflicts.

For the unions, anxious to resist a wage cut at this time, if possible, it no doubt seems better strategy to take a strike vote rather than risk an unfavorable arbitral decree, especially as it is fairly certain that before a strike could become effective, a fact-finding board would be appointed to investigate and report upon the dispute. During the time that this board was conconducting its inquiry and for 30 days thereafter, the law requires that the status quo shall be maintained. Thus for a lengthy period, approximately three months—the country could count upon uninterrupted railway service regardless of the outcome of the strike vote. So long a delay offers opportunity for adjustments that at the moment may seem quite unattainable.

In the event that no compromise in respect to wage payments can be reached in the months ahead, the country will be forced to consider very seriously what is to be the fate of the railroads. If railway labor takes the position that no wage reductions, however reasonable, are justified, even if that means forcing more carriers to join the large number now in the hands of receivers, it becomes a serious question whether private ownership and management of the roads is any longer feasible or desirable. If the wages of rail labor are to be maintained at present high levels regardless of the ability of the carriers to pay them and remain solvent, we shall be forced to consider a change of status.

In the case of privately owned and managed industries, wages and other operating costs are adjusted of necessity to meet changing economic conditions. If such adjustments are forbidden in case of the railroads, or if they have to be made at the expense of investors only, it is certain that private capital will not be available for employment in the industry. The only recourse in such case is to transfer the roads to the Government or arrange for their permanent subsidization.

The public at large has a very imperfect understanding of the larger issues involved in the present controversy over rail wages. It would be extremely interesting and also helpful to the regulatory authorities who have to struggle with these difficult problems to sound out popular sentiment on the question of public ownership of the railways. The replies would have little significance, however, unless it was made clear to those interrogated that public ownership of the roads is not a matter for voluntary decision in the remote future. The policies now being followed in dealing with them will determine their eventual destiny, and the decision may not be long delayed.

The Chaco Broadcasts.

Statistics compiled by the Associated Press provide a grim footnote to the recent commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the Kellogg-Briand anti-war pact. Since that document was signed at Paris in 1928, some 2,500,000 men have been killed in fighting—considerably more than 1,000,000 in China, more than 1,000,000 in Spain and an estimated total of 150,000 in Ethiopia and the Chaco. The world, as Mr. Hull emphasized, is not yet peace-minded.

Not all of the nations engaged in warfare during the past decade, however, have missed the moral that no one wins in war. Today, in the heart of South America, commissioners from six neutral countries are surveying the boundary lines of the Chaco to compromise the divergent claims of Bolivia and Paraguay in that region. In celebration of this solution of a prolonged and cantankerous dispute, representatives of the two countries recently addressed the world over the air. Both testified to the complete futility of the Chaco hostilities. The Paraguayan spoke of the "dreadful ordeal" of the fighting which failed to "solve by any means the problem from which it sprang." The minister of Bolivia echoed this note of contrition.

How to change this hindsight into foresight is one of the most pressing tasks of our times. Arbitration is clearly one way of solving disputes likely to lead to war. Unfortunately, the success of arbitration, as demonstrated in the Chaco controversy, is too commonly discounted. It is taken for granted that the method worked in this instance only because the problems of the Western Hemisphere are relatively simple. The error in this view was testified by the chief of the Latin-American division of the Department of State speaking on the same Chaco broadcast. Mr. Duggan made it clear that public opinion had been inflamed, bitternesses engendered and great suffering and sacrifice endured before the combatants at last saw the light.

The 50-year-old Chaco dispute and its solution provides the world—Old as well as New—with a commentary on the futility of war and with a heartening hint of the way in which western civilization can yet be preserved.

Now Who't Bluffing?

The President And The Purge

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The purge is nothing new. History only repeats itself. In the second century the Roman state was a republic, ultimate sovereignty was in the Roman people. They could through their legislative assembly enact laws.

The emperor was the first citizen to whom the Roman people delegated their sovereignty for the time being. As time went on the emperor became thought of as the ultimate repository of sovereignty. His power began to be felt when he wielded the authority which the sovereign Roman people delegated to him.

Under the Roman system a magistrate had no power to render a decision or judgment. Such decisions were rendered only by arbiters chosen for the case.

This power was also in time delegated to the emperor. Power to make or declare laws by edict originally belonged to the magistrate of the Roman republic and was exercised by praetors or judicial magistrates. In the beginning edicts were pronouncements by a magistrate of a course which he proposed to take to the end that citizens might know what to expect. In time these pronouncements easily became authority and had the force and effect of law. When the power of the magistrate was delegated to the emperor the power of issuing an edict also passed to him.

EDWARD WESTERLUND.
Sterling, Va., Aug. 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The public welcomes new words and phrases. "Purge" is getting stale. Why not purge the purgers and clear the air? Mary Chalmers Hood in The Post of August 25, 1938, gave a new expression—"Salvation lies in scuttling the 'New Deal.'"

Leaders with common sense are needed, not persons who resort to spite and revenge to gain their ends. "Mens sane in corpore sano."

Why not spend time in stamping out communism and less time in forcing men who are seeking the dignified seat in the Senate to spend time and money in justifying this and that act.

Give us men who are more intent on our Nation's needs than on self-interest. OLD TIMER.
Arlington, Va., Aug. 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Stalin in Russia, Hitler in Germany and Mussolini in Italy have purged their respective countries of all who dared criticize or oppose in the slightest degree their absolute and tyrannical dictatorships. In this country, under Franklin Roosevelt, we are headed in the same direction.

Of course, no one anticipates that one of his personal charms would ever show the physical inhumanity of the dictators of Europe. But he is certainly using every coercive influence that he can and increasing the national deficit by billions in order to increase and perpetuate his power; which, of course, would make the perfect dictatorial set-up for any future racketeering or red successor, possibly as merciless as the Terrorists of the French revolution or present dictators in Europe with their inhuman purges and persecutions.

Our own Fuehrer has sought not only to make the courts but also Congress rubber stamps for his thumb. He is even selecting those whom he wants elected to Congress to be his representatives, if not the people's. Anyone who distrusts his dangerous and half-baked policies as already responsible for serious economic recession is marked for the purge. He shows malice for all and charity for none of those who dare in the least degree to say him nay.

In crusading for his New Deal Roosevelt neglects the square deal, taught by Christ and also by such American statesmen as Washingmen, Jefferson and Lincoln. The rats of communism, fascism and other un-American "isms" are now gnawing at the vitals of our form of government. With our present steady approach to national bankruptcy, we may eventually have black death for the common or the forgotten man. In fact, our previously proud and progressive country may get into the dark ages of economic life unless, to prevent absolute dictatorship, we purge ourselves politically of Roosevelt and all his big "yes men."

Those who are on his "purge list" should be on the honor list of the American people. He is the one, not his critics, who should be purged for the country's good.

HENRY D. BAKER.
Durham, N. C., Aug. 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Upon What Meat?," set the populace verily to considering important questions of state. Is the old phrase, "Delenda est Carthago," to be converted into "Democracy and the rights of States must be destroyed along with protection from confiscatory taxation for the benefit of one man and his aides whose political powers depend thereon?"

A. F. J.'s letter in your issue of today, the twentieth, captioned "Gratuitous Grandiosity," brings forth another symptom of another attack of "Messiah complex" in the puerile assurance to Canada for no sound reason or excuse. We still remember a "Messiah complex" of a former President which did not keep us out of the World War.

Only the captains like Ickes and Hopkins would be benefited by the attempted "purge." Succeeding in that, this small clique will seize and take over the Government of the United States.

HUMBLE CITIZEN.
Washington, August 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Would you please publish in your paper the duties of the President of the United States as set forth in the Constitution of the United States? If you are kind enough to do so, it should be run at least for three days.

I feel the people of the United States should know the powers of the President.

BRUCE L. TAYLOR, SR.
Washington, August 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article by Ernest K. Lindley, appearing in your issue of August 31, entitled "Invading Maryland," appears to me to be a mass of half truths and misinformation, and is certainly not a fair statement of the situation.

No fair-minded person (even Senator Tydings) would, in my opinion, deny to Mr. Roosevelt the right to express his views as to the desirability of re-electing a person who has so frequently differed with him on matters of major policy. In doing so he should set forth concretely in a concise and dignified manner a list of the measures the Senator has opposed, and his reasons for considering that their enactment is vital and in the best interests of the people of the United States. To this Senator Tydings should have an adequate opportunity to reply. Then the people of Maryland could make their choice, unhampered by appeals to emotion and prejudices. That was the course adopted by Woodrow Wilson in similar circumstances.

No such reasons for refusing to renominate Mr. Tydings appear in Mr. Lindley's article. His principal point seems to be that Tydings has been disloyal to the Democratic Party. To prove this he quotes Edmund Burke's famous definition of a party. Burke said that the purpose of a party was "to promote by their joint endeavors some principle on which they all agreed." What principle upon which all Democrats are agreed has Tydings failed to promote?

Are we to understand that, in Lindley's judgment, Glass, Byrd, King, Wheeler, Van Nuys, Ed Smith, Clark, Garner, Jesse Jones, McNutt, Kennedy, Lehman, McCarran, George and O'Connor, to name a few, are agreed on all Mr. Roosevelt's "principles," or that they or their constituents ever knowingly agreed to or instructed them to promote them? Or are the abovementioned persons no longer Democrats?

Mr. Lindley thinks the people of Maryland should decide whether Mr. Tydings or Mr. Lewis "expresses more accurately the people's estimate of the Roosevelt program. In view of past happenings how can anyone "estimate" what Mr. Roosevelt's program will be during the next two years! The real question is whether or not the people of Maryland want a Senator who promises blindly in advance (forgetting the way the Supreme Court bill was plucked out of the air) to vote in favor of anything and everything that Roosevelt and/or his advisers may propose regardless of his oath of office, or the best interests of the people of his State.

It will be remembered that when Hitler seized power, after Hindenburg's death, he exacted an oath of personal allegiance from the army.

W. CAMPBELL ARMSTRONG.
Washington, Aug. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nothing is flatter than Roosevelt's words when not backed up by the golden radio delivery, wafting sweet nothings. Seldom are his words effective. They sound, to paraphrase him when discussing the "ad" about the Maryland invasion, pathetic and hysterical.

This may explain much about Mr. Roosevelt and the theories of government inflicted wholesale upon this unfortunate country, backsliding daily toward lower standards.

It is unlucky that his own attitude toward the court plan was not pathetic and hysterical instead of blatant and defiant. For recently he condemned his own methods in this instance by the boast at a press conference: We've obtained our objectives 98 per cent.

It is only when he goes on the warpath after business and utilities that he gets pitiful and vindictive. Pitiful because his vindictiveness adds to the unemployment of those over whose sad case he sheds copious tears; and the periodic clubbing of the golden goose tends to vitiate that animal.

Most "Roosevelt haters" would quickly relapse into nonobstructors or even advocates if he again reversed himself completely, admitted the horde of mistakes initiated by his Administration, and lived up to platform promises to run the Government along sane and economical lines.

WALTER BAHNSEN.
Washington, Aug. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Linn A. E. Gale has set forth a yelp instead of a factual statement in reply to my letter explaining how unethical it was for the President to invade the primaries of a few States in behalf of his "yes" candidates.

We were talking about the President's invasion of the primaries, not about malefactors of great wealth, as Mr. Gale would try to imply was the subject he formerly discussed. Some time when that is a more pressing danger, as it certainly is not at this time—Messrs. Gale and Roosevelt to the contrary—we would talk about that subject, as well as the opposite thereof: the man who is entitled to relief and should have relief.

It begins to look as though the money changers in the White House will plumb the bottom of the barrel before there is any letup. The only reply that is forthcoming is that Mr. Roosevelt was elected by an overwhelming majority in 1932 and 1936 and that this gives him a free pass to bankruptcy. Whether he has one or not, that is the direction he is headed for.

He was elected on an economy platform in 1932, and on another platform in 1936 that refused to commit itself to the packing of the Supreme Court. He has violated both. His opponent directed inquiries to him throughout the 1936 campaign as to his intentions toward the Supreme Court, but he said nothing. So, we come to 1938, and the raping of the States' rights that is now being attempted by the Administration in power, and the beneficiaries are yelling did he not receive injunctions in 1936 to go ahead and throw the Nation in bankruptcy?

The greedy and grasping satellites of this Administration constitute the greatest danger this Nation has ever known. They flout the will of the constituency and all decency in public office by having the effrontery to talk about patronage built on the birth-right of Americans unborn.

The Post Impressionist

Initiation.

HEY, PAW, can I have the car tonight? . . . I'm going to a dance — Slaphappy Smith's Swingeroos . . . Huh? Oh, that's the name of the orchestra . . . It ain't a screwy name; Slaphappy is an alligator . . . Naw, not a reptile; a sender, a fellow that throws jitter sauce . . . You know, stuff you play on doghouses and licorice sticks, and slip horns . . . No, no, Pop; a doghouse means a bass fiddle.

Lissen, Paw, let me explain. A jitterbug is a hep cat . . . Naw, nothing like an alley cat. It's a guy who can swing, a guy that rips off solid senders . . . Gosh, Paw, don't you ever get around? Lissen; swing is when a 'gator gets in the groove, when he starts sending . . . Sending swing; what else do you send? . . . What for? Lissen, Paw. Did you ever truck? Well, did you ever lolly? Can you dance at all? . . . And you never heard of a shag? Or a lolly? Or trucking? Why, Pop, where have you been? Lissen. All the hep cats and 'gators and jitterbugs know those hops. Lissen. I'll turn the radio on . . .

That radio ain't busted. That's swing. Lissen to that bum sending on that licorice stick . . . A licorice stick is a clarinet . . . I dunno why; they just call it that. Now hear them babies sending out of the world. Man, if that wouldn't make a bum peel the apple, nothing would! . . . Huh, I ain't got a busted leg; I'm rug-cutting . . . Naw, figuratively speaking. Boy, ain't that a clambake? If that don't get the woofhounds, nothing will . . . A woofhound is a whackie, a cat, a jitterbug . . . Yeah, "someone who is addicted to either playing or dancing to swing music." You're catching on, Pop.

Paw, do you know who that is? . . . He ain't a crazy man; that's Benny Goodman . . . You're dern tootin' he's an orchestra leader. That guy is always in the groove . . . Being in the groove is when a bum is really sending out of the world . . . I told you once that a bum sends swing music to the cats . . . I dunno who started calling us that, but it fits . . . Sure, I'm a woofhound. I peel the apple, I'm one of the best rug-cutters I know . . . I ain't braggin'; I'm just good and I admit it.

Lissen, Paw; that's Connie Boswell singin' "Martha" . . . Sure, it used to be classical, but nobody ever heard of it then. Connie gave it to the jitterbugs . . . Man, don't she get it on the down-beat? . . . How in the dickens would I know what the down-beat is? The whackies just say that."

Don't that make your feet itch, Pop? . . . It don't? Gosh, I thought it made everybody's feet itch, something like Athlete's Foot.

Well, some-swing music is written for swing-and-some, like "Martha." It's a swing version of a classical piece, or something else corney . . . Huh? Corney is sour jitter sauce, or moldy sending, or something that ain't swing . . . Lissen, Paw; don't ask me where the names came from. I don't know . . . Everybody uses them . . . Everybody ain't crazy.

Oh, baby! Now we got Tommy Dorsey. There's a feller that can really send . . . Sure, he sends different from Goodman. All the swing bands play in different styles. Benny Goodman, according to all the hep cats, plays Harlem swing and Dorsey plays Chicago swing, and I don't know the difference; so don't ask me.

Dorsey sends with a slip horn . . . O. K., then, a trombone. Goodman sends with a licor—oh, dammit, a clarinet. All the boys that are real solid senders have a special hot instrument . . . I guess maybe "A Tisket A Tasket" is the most popular now. "Martha" is still good enough for some rug-cutters . . . Well, if there is a classic of swing, it's "Sing, Sing," by Benny Goodman. But all jitterbugs have their favorites . . . Sure, my favorite is "Sugar Blues," by Clyde McCoy. That guy is sure out of the world on that one.

Well, that "Sing, Sing" is a jam session . . . Lissen, Paw; don't ever let it get out that you don't know what a jam session is. A jam session is when a buncha 'gators get together and swing for the fun of it. They usually play the same tune but they play it any way they want to . . . Yeah, in the groove. You're catching on quick, Paw.

You can either lissen to swing or dance to it. It takes a lot of will power, though, to just lissen . . . The dance I'm going is gonna be crawling with jitterbugs and hep cats and such. Sure, Slaphappy can send okey. His band's specialty is the drums. They got a feller that can really slap the hide.

Sure, this is what a cat wears to a clambake . . . I know the coat and pants don't match; they ain't supposed to . . . Sure, they're "rahrah" shoes. Don't you know what a cat shags in? . . .

A frail don't really peel the apple in nothing but a sport dress. The wear and tear is too much for a long skirt.

Huh? You want to go to the dance with me? Lissen, Paw, you're no rug-cutter. Gosh, Paw, if your blood pressure is high, it's hard to say what'll happen to you. But if you still want to go, I'm game.

I'm going stag; how about you? Okey, let's go!

Fair Enough

Dies Hits A Nerve.

BY the shrill squawk of the Bolos and their journalistic fellow travelers against the Dies committee's inquiry into communistic activities Mr. Dies and his colleagues may know that they have touched a nerve. The same fellow travelers who applauded the appointment to the Supreme Court of a meal-ticket progressive who previously had joined a Fascist organization in order to obtain a cheap political job have denounced Mr. Dies with great fury and no conspicuous regard for truth. The inquiry was all right as long as it confined itself to the activities of the Fascists and Nazis, for, after all, they are upstart rivals of the Bolos and the fellow travelers, selling practically the same line of goods under a different label on the same side of the street. But when witnesses began to accuse the Communists of activities which they themselves proudly admit in less guarded moments, Mr. Dies became a tool of fascism.

• • • •

BUT AFTER ALL, what accusations have been made that the Bolos want to deny?

That Communists are influential in the C. I. O.? They admit that. They favor the C. I. O. and join it, and it would be contrary to their purpose not to dominate it wherever they can. So, of course, they are active and influential in the C. I. O., and, moreover, while still denying it they stoutly assert their right to do all this.

A C. I. O. leader, accused of sympathy for the Communists, fumed at this and denied that he was an enrolled Communist—which wasn't the charge at all—but corrobrated the witness by avowing a belief that Communist Russia is the world's greatest effort for human betterment.

It was said that the old League Against War and Fascism was under Moscow influence. This league's reputation came to be such that it presently was deemed wise to change its name to the League for Peace and Democracy. But neither name contains any hint against communism, and there is no denial that the Communists and their fellow travelers favor the league, whether or not it be admitted that they dominate it or that it is under direct influence from Moscow. Is there anything fascistic, is there anything that savors of political hounding, in the simple presentation of this information about the League for Peace and Democracy?

• • • •

IT WAS SAID, further, that the Communists attempt to seduce non-Communists by inviting them to join various leagues with innocent names so that their names may be exploited for ballyhoo purposes. By personal experience I know that. I was solicited to join the League Against War, and Fascism, with no suggestion that it was under the Moscow influence, and a priest once wrote to say that he, too, had been invited and to ask if it were a Communist organization. He had heard as much, but couldn't tell from the name.

It was said also that Shirley Temple had unwittingly lent her name to the Communist propaganda by sending greetings to a Paris publication which was said to be communistic.

Nobody said Shirley Temple was a dangerous Red, but with fellow travelers in the newspaper business Mr. Dies could hardly expect entirely objective treatment of the actual testimony. It was made to appear that she had been depicted as a dangerous Red and that Mr. Dies had taken this charge seriously. But the facts were not disputed at all, nor is the charge disputed that the Communists do seduce prominent persons into lending their names to communistic organizations with misleading titles.

• • • •

OF COURSE, in such hearings where prejudiced witnesses are invited to sling their songs overstatement and sensationalism are common. Thus the Communists and fellow travelers have been given occasion to jeer at the report that Federal officials would be connected with subsidiary groups of the Communist organization. But further inquiry might dig deeper and produce more evidence, and, anyway, when did the Communists and fellow travelers become so sensitive to overstatement and sensationalism on the part of ad lib witnesses before Congressional committees? It has always pleased them when directed against any of their pet enemies, whether the charges stood up or not.

Mr. Dies should do very well in Hollywood, too, where fellow travelers abound in the writing branch of the movies, and members of an opposition group will tell him of a plan to drive out of the business all writers who refuse to join a group having the enthusiastic favor of the Communists and fellow travelers.

Mr. Dies is doing very well, but he should remember to come back to the Nazi investigation before his committee goes broke, just to make things even.

The Labor Act

C. I. O. Aligned With Labor Relations Board In Opposing Revisions Of Wagner Law Proposed Loudly By A. F. Of L.

This is the fourth of five articles on the prospective Congressional battle over amendment of the Wgner labor relations act. It presents the attitude of the Labor Relations Board and the C. I. O. The fifth and last will discuss the President's study of the British labor laws and correlate the arguments.

By Richard L. Turner.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

THE COMMITTEE FOR INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION likes the Wagner act as it is. "No changes," is its slogan. It says that by protecting the right of the workers to organize, the law has resulted in the growth of "a great union labor movement," in regions which formerly knew nothing but "an antiunion terror." And it cites as a corollary result that "the Wagner act has become as much hated by reactionary exploiters of labor as it is loved by the working people."

The C. I. O., further, blames current attacks upon the law on "Tory industrialists," who, it says, are endeavoring to obtain amendments which would destroy it as "an effective instrument for protecting labor's rights."

Predicting that such a campaign, by itself, could not succeed, the C. I. O. then aims its shafts at its bitter rival in the union labor field, the American Federation of Labor, and says:

"A more real danger arises from the support which these attacks are receiving from leaders of the A. F. of L. . . . who are playing into the hands of the enemies of all labor with demands for crippling amendments."

To A. F. of L. attacks against board decisions, the C. I. O. replies with a reminder that it, too, has "complained bitterly" at decisions ordering that bargaining be on a craft-union basis and abrogating, in one instance, a C. I. O. contract, just as Federation contracts have been ordered canceled. The organization continues:

"But that is no reason why it should join in the employers' demand for curtailing board powers which are used in the great majority of cases to protect the rights of all workers, irrespective of whether they are A. F. of L. or C. I. O."

Labor Board, C. I. O. Both Oppose Revision.

Like the C. I. O., the Labor Board itself sees no need for revising the act. Its members, too, are always ready to answer the often-repeated charges that it unfairly favors labor, as against employer, or the C. I. O. as against the A. F. of L.

"If critics who accuse us of being pro-labor mean thereby, and many of them do, that . . . we do not carefully and judiciously weigh the evidence to determine whether the statute has been violated; that upon the accusation by an employe or a union, we assume that an employer has violated the law, they are utterly wrong," says J. Warren Madden, the chairman of the board. He adds a detailed account of the laborious process by which, he says, the board seeks to get at the facts.

When the A. F. of L. complains that its craft unions are not being given proper recognition by the board officials of the board reply that when such unions have been well organized and investigation has shown them to be truly representative of the men involved, the craft union has been made the bargaining agent. This policy was adopted before the C. I. O. was organized, the officials say, and has been followed without deviation.

In answer to the Federation's complaints about board orders canceling contracts between employers and A. F. of L. craft unions, board officials assert that in the early days, the Federation was much pleased at orders abrogating contracts between management and company unions. Since the formation of the C. I. O., board spokesmen say, A. F. of L. contracts have been abrogated in instances where it has been found that the employer had influenced the employes in selecting the union they would join, and thereby denied them the freedom of choice guaranteed by the law. In such cases, board officials add, an election is held and the board abides by the results.

Statistics Quoted To Show Impartiality.

WHEN charged with favoritism to the C. I. O., board officials like to get out the figures, as Madden did in a similar instance before a Senate committee last winter. He said that in 20 decisions involving an A. F. of L.-C. I. O. conflict, 14 had gone to the federation. No later figures were available. In Labor Board elections giving workers a choice between the two organizations, figures recently published by the board said the C. I. O. won 160 and the Federation 48.

The board is proud of having disposed of 54 per cent of the 16,164 cases it has handled by working out an agreement between the employer and employe. Forty-one per cent reached a result favorable to the employer through the withdrawal of union charges, frequently upon the advice of board representatives, or the dismissal of such charges as groundless. Five per cent were disposed of in other ways.

Officials of the board or of the C. I. O., and in some cases, both, have an answering argument [illegible] every amendment to the Wagner act that has been proposed.

To the suggestion that the law forbid "coercion from any source," board members have replied that the whole body of State and local law is filled with penalties for the forms of "coercion" available to the unions.

Moreover, board officials believe that without an immensely enlarged force, they could not even begin to "police" such a situation. It would "take an army," they say.

The C. I. O. backing these arguments, also says the "no coercion from any source" amendments "hide a vicious attack upon the right to strike," through the possible application of old court interpretations of the word "coercion" to labor disputes.

Employers' Advice Declared Inadmissible.

WHEN THE proposal is raised that employers be given the privilege of advising employes between two rival unions or of appealing to the board to order an election to determine which union represents the employes, a board official says that the "fundamental philosophy of the law" makes the choice of a union "the exclusive concern of the employes themselves."

The C. I. O. says the amendment is proposed to enable employers to hamstring young unions by obtaining an election before they can reach their potential strength.

The C. I. O. alone makes answer to the Federation's appeal for an amendment forcing the board to recognize craft units as a collective bargaining basis. It says:

"The argument is that a craft minority should have the right to decide for itself what union it desires. This is like saying that the City of New York should have the right to secede from the United States if the majority of New Yorkers voted to do so.

"Such procedure defeats the wishes of the majority of all employes, flouts the democratic principle of majority rule, makes for industrial conflict and complications, and seriously weakens labor in its fight for equality of bargaining power with the great employing corporations."

British Labor Law

By Ernest Lindley

The President's Commission Reports.

HOW a mature system of collective bargaining works is nearly outlined in the report of the President's Commission on Britain. As this is a unanimous report, bearing the signature of American industrialists, including the president of the National Association of Manufacturers as well as of representatives of labor and of the general public, it should be generally accepted as factually correct.

A mere statement of the facts ought to dissipate misunderstandings of the British law and experience which seem to have taken hold in this country, especially among employers. As to how closely in detail the United States can or should adopt the British pattern of industrial relations there is bound to be difference of opinion. But, among a multitude of facts in this report, a few bulk too large to be overlooked.

• • • •

FIRST, and most importantly, collective bargaining in Great Britain is, as the President has said, "an accepted fact." The time has long since passed when anybody challenges the right of workers to organize and to bargain with employers. Only a minority of the workers are organized—in 1936 roughly one-third of those in Great Britain and Ireland who were regarded as eligible for union membership. But the right to organize and bargain collectively is undisputed.

Secondly, where collective bargaining is the practice it has, on the whole, promoted industrial peace. There is a complex structure of conciliation, mediation and voluntary arbitration, most of it based on collective contracts. When the strike is resorted to, it is usually conducted with little violence. Employers do not import strikebreakers. To quote the report: "Even where organization is not extensive there is a general feeling among workers and employers that 'the job belongs to the man,' and that it is not right for men to take, or to be asked to take, the jobs of their fellows." Both sides proceed on the assumption that the controversy will be settled and that it is desirable that work be resumed with a minimum of bitterness. Discrimination against strikers and their leaders is negligible.

Thirdly, most of the basic agreements are between unions and national associations of employers. Employers prefer to deal with strong unions and unions prefer to deal with strong employer associations. Industry-wide basic agreements on wages and hours tend to eliminate unfair competition at the expense of labor.

Fourthly, the trade unions themselves avoid or settle two kinds of disputes which in this country often lead to strikes. These are jurisdictional disputes—as to whether a particular operation should be performed by one type of craftsman or another—and organizational disputes—as to which union has the right to organize a particular group of workers. Within the British trade union system there exist craft unions, federations of craft unions, industrial unions, and so-called general unions which take in unskilled workers from all industries and craft workers in unorganized areas.

Fifthly, collective agreements "rest upon good faith rather than upon legal enforceability." The principal purpose and effect of British trade union legislation has been to free unions of legal liability for acts in contemplation or furtherance of trade disputes. If the British experience is a useful guide to us, employers who clamor for incorporation of trade unions and for similiar legislation to make union "more responsible" are looking in exactly the wrong direction. British trade unions are not incorporated. They may register or be "certified," but the rights and obligations which go with either status are of no interest to employers.

• • • •

ESPECIALLY worthy of careful scrutiny are the facts concerning the trade disputes and trade unions act of 1927 reported by the President's commission. This was the legislation passed by a Tory Parliament following the general strike of 1926. It was not intended to affect the normal processes of collective bargaining, and it has not done so. Its primary aim was to "delegalize" a general strike. Contrary to statements which have been published in this country, it does not even forbid sympathetic strikes unless they are also "designed or calculated to coerce the government either directly or by inflicting hardship upon the community." During the three years 1934, 1935, 1936, there were 39 sympathetic strikes involving 120,000 workers, as compared with 43 sympathetic strikes involving 71,000 workers in the three years 1923, 1924, and 1925, immediately preceding the general strike. The section of the 1927 law which restricts the use of trade union funds for political purposes was a Tory thrust at the Labor Party and is pretty certain to be repealed when, or if, the Labor Party gets a majority in Parliament.

• • • •

THE BRITISH experience strongly supports the conclusion that the national labor relations act is essentially sound. The British do not need a special agency to protect the right of self-organization and to promote collective bargaining, because they have long recognized both. Their experience does indicate that self-organization and collective bargaining are the fundamentals of sound industrial relations. Responsible unions, regular processes for mediation and voluntary arbitration, the diminishment of violence—all the rest—follows in due course.

Those who find the transitional period exasperating can take heart from an observation of the Royal Commission on Labor in 1894: "The most quarrelsome period of a trade's existence is when it is just emerging from the patriarchal condition in which each employer governs his establishment and deals with his own men with no outside interference, but has not yet fully entered into that other condition in which transactions take place between strong associations fully recognizing each other."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Elmer Twitchell Joins Golf Marathon.

Elmer Twitchell today succumbed to the how-many-holes-can-a-golfer-stand mania. When Elmer left the house just before sunrise today with four suitcases and two hampers of provisions, Mrs. Twitchell thought he was going abroad, but Elmer explained that he was out to hang up a new record in Marathon Golf.

• • • •

At noon considerable confusion had ensued and Elmer was in a bitter argument with the officials. Elmer insisted he was on his fifth round of the course, but the judges ruled it was just dizziness.

Hole by hole reports later in the day came in as follows:

• • • •

Hole 97—Twitchell's total score at this point is 1,867 strokes, only 40 over incredible. He is off his game a bit, due to runover heels.

• • • •

Hole 98—Twitchell still going strong, with seventh change of underwear, a new high for the course. He was short of the green in 1,875 and missed three putts for a total of 1,878. Attributes his poor putting to a Charleyhorse.

• • • •

Hole 99—Twitchell broke his twenty-second club as he approached this hole and is now starting on a fresh bag.

• • • •

Hole 100—A change from sandals to carpet slippers failed to improve his game. His temper is slightly worse, due to going into the rough in his bare feet.

• • • •

Hole 101—Committee will have to make a technical ruling. Twitchell collapsed and rolled into trap on this hole. Caddies carried him back onto green, bringing up question of disqualification. Twitchell insists he was entitled to a lift.

• • • •

Hole 102—No sign of Twitchell here yet. Scouting parties report him in rough. Has just killed his eighth caddy. Considerable amusement caused by Twitchell's contention, despite fact this is his fifth time around, that he is unfamiliar with course.

Hole 106 (note—Holes 103, 104 and 105 have been skipped on ground of insufficient accommodations for tourists.) Twitchell having bunion trouble. Score now close to 2,000, ten strokes higher than what he used to get for 18 holes. Took five putts. Very angry, and blames it on too much coffee between holes. Loudly complaining that if this golf club were properly run it would have a supply of liniment on every green.

• • • •

Hole 107—Twitchell limping badly. Looks worse than Seabiscuit. Loudly demanding to know what day it is.

• • • •

Hole 108 — Twitchell just knocked down a coach who said, "You're lifting your head." "I can't even lift my feet!" he roared.

Hole 109—Refused to play this because it had no shower bath.

• • • •

Off the Record

"A storm approaching—ceiling zero—that is all!"

Railroad Wages

Railroad workers are debating the wisdom of striking against a proposed 15 per cent wage reduction. The following statistics are pertinent to the argument. The first column indicates the number of cents per dollar of operating revenue absorbed by wages and salaries on Class 1 lines; the second shows the average earnings per hour worked, excluding executives, officials and staff assistants.

Year.	Cents per dollar.	Cents per hour.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett.

New York Cafe-Crawlers.

"I EXPECTED to find New Yorkers different," said Jefferson Abbott, of Silver City, Ohio, but not another race of mankind. It's not my language, not even my country, they're talking about. Don't they speak anything but Stravinsky and Hollywood? Didn't anything ever happen to them but the opera and Esquire? Where did they get that way? Where the hell do they come from?"

"Iowa," ventured Gene Brent. "Iowa, Fall River, Terra Haute, places like that. I don't know their language myself. I'm a New Yorker. We're rather simple here."

• • • •

DAWN POWELL'S new novel, "The Happy Island" (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50), is a witty and sophisticated story about New York cafe-crawlers—people born, so far as anyone of them knew of any of the others, with a canape in one hand and a dry Martini in the other; people whose roots flung back to covered wagons, mining camps, village poolrooms, lonely farms on the prairie, but with their roots snapped off like admission coupons at the gates of the great city; people who wise-cracked and swapped acid jests, who knew everybody whose name appeared in the columns and all the patter—"cork-lined robots." Dawn Powell calls them, who "pop up and down through every one of the ages: Great War, Freud, Proust, Depression, Marx and Streamline," turning constant somersaults, intellectual and amorous, to keep themselves forever wirily young.

• • • •

THERE IS Prudence Bly, night-club singer de luxe, who should know better than to spend her afternoons with Jean Nelson, because she knows very well that "women take too much out of you, they drink too much and too earnestly; they drink the way they used to do china painting and crewelwork and wood burning." There is Steve Estabrook, radio crooner, about whom the two women smilingly fight, and James Pinckney, whose chief talent is appearing secretive, which enables him to hear, and to pass on, many juicy confidences; and "Dol," Darwin O. Lloyd, whose beard lends him some mysterious badge of distinction, so that his liquor is always being drunk by a variety of interesting people as well as by his pretty boys.

There are also the Fellowses and the Brents, who go in for quiet wife-swapping, victims or heroes of those Thursday nights-out which seem to be a feature of this New York crowd, when wives and husbands agree to separate, stepping out of their familiar ruts to visit other ruts and discover them strangely as banal as their own.

• • • •

INTO THIS crowd steps Jeff Abbott, stalwart son of Silver City, who loathes night clubs and clean restaurants, preferring a greasy little Armenian dining room because, though he is not quite aware of the reason, it is sufficiently like a bad railroad cafe in a Midwest village to seem harmlessly homey. Jeff doesn't like New York; to him New York's dislike of his play is evidence of its eternal value. Jeff, like his friend Kittredge, holds that all comfort must be fought as the enemy of integrity.

You know Kittredge. "A few years back communism had entered his dreary life as coyly as a winged Cupid; Kittredge had gladly given up the struggle for bourgeois triumphs to lie in bed all day sympathizing with the workers of the world. He was not a lazy man so much as he was a man who loved talk; he disliked work only as it was an interruption to good conversation." Latterly he had taken up Trotskyism, deeming orthodox communism inadequately revolutionary.

• • • •

DAWN POWELL shuffles these shoddy characters expertly. Some of them take up tap dancing—"which, God knows, is the first step toward psychoanalysis or divorce." Jean goes through a series of her intellectual hours (which consist in talking about like while holding a book); James Pinckney's annual vice appears, a lady from Philadelphia named Evalyn, who carries "a faint bouquet of scrapple and old Republicans." And Prudence, tired of Steve, tired of Jean, tired of night clubs, sadly aware that "there is no magic for tired love," decided that Jeff Abbott represents her Silver City reality. He is her secret candy box. She will go back to Silver City, and to Jeff.

She goes back. Admiring the deft pinpricks with which Dawn Powell has punctured so many New York bubbles and balloons, one wonders anxiously how she will handle that return to the home town. Will she go soft or will she go bitter? She goes neither. She manages deftly to conclude her Manhattan comedy precisely as it should, as it must, be concluded. Her tale is finished; life goes on. These Manhattan types may be hardly worthy of her wit, but Dawn Powell makes her paste-diamond society sparkle, echoing its wise cracks with a brittle wisdom all her own.

In The Mediterranean

By Europax

The Muddle Of Mare Nostrum.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

WHILE the eyes of the world have been fixed anxiously on Czechoslovakia, the Mediterranean muddle has been getting worse. In fact, the situation around the shores of the Southern Sea has become so serious that it may soon steal the show from central Europe.

To begin with, the Spanish affair has again taken on a somber aspect now that the rebel Gen. Franco has rejected the British scheme for withdrawing foreign combatants from both sides. Franco's note to London, dispatched only after he had consulted Rome and Berlin, seems to indicate clearly that Italy and Germany have no slightest intention of abandoning their adventure in Spain, but on the contrary are determined to carry on until a victory has been won for Franco and Spain has been made into an allied Fascist state.

Mussolini, in response to British inquiries, made no secret of the fact that he is still sending soldiers and supplies to Spain. This continued Italian intervention, combined with Franco's rejection of the British proposals, is almost certain to mean that the French government will now relax the strict control of the Pyrenees' frontier imposed last June. Aided by the resultant increase in war supplies, the loyalists will be better able to resist, thereby making still more massive intervention by Italy and Germany necessary to insure a Franco victory.

• • • •

LEAVING the complications of the Spanish problem itself aside—though they might at any time become a grave threat to peace—the general diplomatic situation in the Mediterranean is deeply disquieting. The repercussions of the turn for the worse taken by the Spanish question lately are seen in renewed tension between Italy and England as well as between Italy and Franco.

The Anglo-Italian agreement, for the sake of which Anthony Eden was thrown overboard, now seems very remote. It was to become effective only after a "satisfactory settlement" of the Spanish threat to European peace. Such a settlement certainly seems far distant today.

As for the Franco-Italian negotiations for a similiar accord in the Mediterranean, they are even more completely wrecked. Relations between France and Italy are really bad. Neither country allows any of its citizens to go to the other. France held its annual summer military maneuvers very ostentatiously on the Alpine frontier, while Italy equally openly started work on fortifications which Mussolini proudly claims have "sealed the Alps" press fulminates constantly against invasion. The Italian press fulminates constantly against France, and in France even these papers which have hitherto been friendly now protest that Mussolini is going too far.

UNDERLYING this tension between Italy and France are two chief factors. The first is the Rome-Berlin axis. The second is Tunisia.

After refusing blindly for years to believe in the possibility of Italy and Germany getting together, the French government has now gone to the opposite extreme. It sees in the Rome-Berlin axis the gravest threat to French security and cannot forgive Mussolini for going over to Hitler. France would not have the slightest fear of Italy, unattached to Germany. And France feels that without Italian support, Hitler would be most unlikely to start a war.

The combination is, of course, a heavy blow to the French because it means that they must now fortify and defend the Alps as well as the Rhine. Not only that, but the presence of Italian forces and German airmen in Spain means that the Pyrenees, also, will have to be defended. Thus the Rome-Berlin axis may almost be said to have tripled France's defense problem. Small wonder, then, that the French are irate and on edge.

"Oh, don't worry about the Italians," a Frenchman said to me the other day. "If Germany starts anything we'll buy off Mussolini with Tunisia, and that will be that!"

• • • •

UNFORTUNATELY this ingenious solution is not so simple. Certainly Italy covets Tunisia, which has almost as many Italian inhabitants as French. Situated on the north African coast just opposite Sicily and just west of Lybia, the Tunisian protectorate is viewed by imperialistic Italians as an essential part of the revived Roman empire.

But it is clear that no French government—above all no Popular Front, anti-Fascist cabinet—could possibly hand over Tunis to Mussolini. Knowing this, the Duce is making his own plans. He is endeavoring to complete the Rome-Berlin axis with what has been called a "Rome-Islam axis"—that is to say, he is and has been for some time busy trying to enlist the Arabs, not openly on his side, but against their French and British masters along the shores of the Mediterranean.

This, of course, is where underlies much of the trouble Britain is having in Palestine. By becoming anti-Jew, Mussolini automatically goes a long way toward putting the Arabs—always anti-Jewish—on his side against the British and French. This is an aspect of the Mediterranean problem which will be seen to assume tremendous importance as time goes on.

The redeeming feature of all this, of course, is that the Rome-Berlin axis, solid as it seems at the moment, is by no means invulnerable. The French do not forget that in 1914 Italy had an alliance with Germany—yet she came into the war on the side of the allies. Certainly everything possible would be done to help history repeat itself in this respect, if the necessity should arise.

• • • •

MEANTIME, France is immediately concerned with the presence of Italian airmen and warships at Mallorca, the Balearic island belonging to Spain. The strategic position of this island would be very damaging to French communications with northern Africa in case of war. And there have been persistent rumors lately that Mussolini has made the statement that he had "no intention of ever getting out of Mallorca."

The British are almost equally worried over the threat to Gibraltar which would result if trouble broke out in Europe while Italian and German forces still commanded the guns trained on the fortress from nearby Spanish territory and the airplanes from Spanish Morocco across the Straits. That is the great and dangerous significance of the Spanish affair. Relatively negligible in itself, Spain at the disposition of a United Germany and Italy would be a deadly dagger in the backs of both Britain and France. European peace depends largely on whether this dagger can be kept sheathed.

AAA Potato Plan Believed Outvoted

By the Associated Press.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration said potato growers in 15 late-producing States apparently had defeated a proposed marketing control program by a narrow margin.

The referendum was held August 19 to 24.

Rails Asked to Reduce Rates on Export Wheat

The Agriculture Department appealed yesterday to Eastern and Southern railroads to reduce freight rates from Central and Western grain-producing areas on wheat designated for sale in foreign markets.

Lower rates, it said, would help the Government place 100,000,000 bushels of surplus grain on world markets.

U. S. Health Aide Sent To Charlottesville Field

Dr. Thomas H. Diseker, assistant surgeon of the United States Public Service, has been ordered to report for duty at Charlottesville, Va., in connection with field study in syphilis.

Recently relieved from duty at Hot Springs, Ark., Dr. Diseker will report to Drs. D. C. Smith and George M. Lawson at the University of Virginia.

McFadden Plane Cracks Up on Coast

..G,RI Los Angeles, Sept. 1 (AP).—Bernarr MacFadden, 72, flying publisher, today cracked up the plane he planned to use in the Bendix Air Race at Cleveland next Saturday and announced he was out of the speed classic.

MacFadden was practicing landings at Union Air Terminal when the plane was caught in a quartering cross-wind and crashed. MacFadden was unhurt.

Coal Agency Exempts Five Producer-Users

The Bituminous Coal Commission yesterday exempted five additional companies from the bituminous coal act because coal they produced was consumed by them.

They included the Norfolk & Western Railway on coal produced in Vulcan collieries, Howard colliery and Pond Creek collieries.

Loan to Power 'Co-op' Authorized by State

Richmond, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today authorized the Shenandoah Electric Co-operative to borrow an additional 273,000 from the Rural Electrification Administration.

The loan, carrying an interest charge of 2.73 per cent, will be spent on construction of extensions to the rural power lines which the co-operative is building in the middle of the Shenandoah Valley.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Strange commentary on democracy—none of the trio high in popular polls (Hull, Garner, Farley) is given a chance for the 1940 nomination by the politicos . . . Signs at the air-cooled Senate offices should read: "Office Hours: When it's above 90." . . . Though the White House fence is 18 inches (and $15,000) higher, it isn't much harder to climb over than it was.

Mrs. Tydings . . . unmentioned

* * * *

They say the new top-of-the-head hair-do is becoming for Mrs. FDR . . . Funny how the high officials regard Alaska as a critical military spot during our hot summers; during our cold winters it's the Canal Zone that's threatened—and visited.

* * * *

RAZZLE DAZZLE: This is the season when the bureaucrats decide just what they can do about some of the laws Congress passed—and no more . . . Several members have spent their vacations in their air-cooled offices, just resting and catching up on their reading . . .

"—statesman consults soothsayer"

One of our more resourceful statesmen at the State Department has just consulted a Washington fortune teller about the likelihood of war . . . She told him to beware a Dark Man. He is wondering whether she meant Hitler, the brunet nordic, or Mussolini, the swarthy Aryan, or a dusky Jap . . . He's taking no chances, though; he's bewaring all three.

* * * *

In his official thumbnail biography, Senator Tydings, the embattled Marylander, doesn't mention his charming and affluent wife . . . His New Deal rival, Representative Dave Lewis, didn't learn to read until he was a 10-year-old coal miner.

What's more, he's probably the only man in the world who belongs to both the Elks Lodge and to the English Society for Psychical Research; Lewis, I mean, not Tydings; so far as I know, Senator Tydings is not an Elk.

* * * *

POTOMAC FIFFLE: In a Washington movie theater a newsreel shot of Georgia's Candidate Camp upholding Roosevelt drew a big burst of applause . . . But a shot of his rival, Senator George, blinking into the camera, upholding himself, got even more . . . Maybe it was prophetic that the day after he defeated Roosevelt's reorganization bill, Representative John O'Connor lunched alone in the House Restaurant surrounded by 200 of his colleagues. Now the heat's really on him.

"—another Nazi victory"

A returned voyager vows that while in Germany this summer he saw a big, fierce Nazi burn a copy of one of the Potash & Perlmutter books—which, he says, are regarded by Nazi ideologists as even more dangerous than "Nize Baby," which was burned in Vienna as one of the first official acts of the Berlin regime.

NEGLIGEE PORTRAIT.

MARTIN DIES.

This vigorous Congressman from Texas, one of a delegation of unusual effectiveness, wears habitually a pugnacious facial expression and what looks like a scornful curl of the lips. To clippings about the red menace, read into the records of his committee on subversive propaganda, he listened with almost childlike wonderment; to rumors and gossip against the C. I. O., by Frey of the A. F. of L., with something like gullibility. For one who is among the most audible in Congress, he has been strangely subdued at his committee hearings. Some observers think he may be like a lion when he takes up Fascist propaganda. Others think he has the makings of a good Fascist himself. Why Speaker Bankhead ever appointed him to the chairmanship of such a committee is one of the puzzles of 1938.

SPIES IN WHITE TIES: It's a Nazi boast that they can copy an American military plane within 90 days . . . Some of the plans filched by foreign spies have one or two important details omitted, like a recipe given by a reluctant housewife . . . Often one military attache with a camera, invited to a military function, can find out more without violating any rules than ten spies in the shadows.

Out of Jail a Few Hours, Bumps Into Car, Police Again

It's "out again, in again" for Charles Buchanan, 34, colored, of the 1600 block Meigs place northwest.

Only yesterday Buchanan was released from the workhouse at Occoquan, Va., where he served 40 days for operating a car without a permit.

A few hours later he bumped his automobile into a parked car. The police came.

"Let's see your permit," they said.

Buchanan shook his head. He didn't have any.

Phoebus' Aim: More Women In State Posts

Gov. Nice's Only Rival Also Pledges $2 Auto Tags at G. O. P. Rally.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Sept. 1.—Republican Day at the Harford County Fair brought two gubernatorial candidates here today, one of them a Democrat.

State Senator Harry W. Phoebus, the Republican candidate, and State Comptroller William S. Gordy, the Democratic candidate for Governor, were the candidates who appeared.

Phoebus, opposing Gov. Nice for the G. O. P. nomination, outlined six planks in his platform on which he said his campaign rests.

They were:

Reduction of the real estate tax "to help the farmer who is hard pressed; removal of the State roads commission from politics; $2 automobile tags; reduction of utility rates; old-age pensions for everyone over 65, and the appointment of women to half of all appointive political offices controlled by the Governor."

Gordy, who has been campaigning for the county vote, told the audience:

"Too long has the welfare of the counties of Maryland been overlooked and neglected through the domination of Baltimore City influences. The time has come when the counties must raise their voices and say who shall be their public officials.

"Our State and party must not be turned over to the professional city politicians to be controlled and manipulated by hand-picked candidates. The counties alone can save their government from scheming manipulators."

Va. Anthem Suggested.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—The State Conservation Commission at the conclusion of a two-day meeting here, referred to Dr. H. J. Eckenrode, commission historian, a suggestion that it recommend adoption of a Virginia State anthem, preferably "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia."

Anti-Noise Culprit, Chicken Demolished

Newark, N. J., Sept. 1 (AP).—Police Judge Anthony Bianco was confident today Domenick Sena's rooster won't crow again in violation of the city's anti-noise ordinance.

Sena told the court:

"I chopped its head off, cooked it and had it for dinner."

"How about the feathers?"

"I burned them."

"And the bones?"

"The cat got them."

Folliard

the National Administration was "totally insane."

The Laidlow Ferry farm has been in the aMtthews family for three generations, and has long been considered the ideal site for the bridge terminal. The bridge, who would save 40 miles of travel for those headed for such historic places in Virginia as Wakefield and Stratford, was conceived in 1916 or thereabouts by Charles M. Ward, of Norfolk, Va. He got permission from the Maryland and Virginia legislatures, but was unable to raise the necessary capital. With the creation of the Public Works Administration, interest was revived.

Some Are Disgusted.

The sudden flurry of interest in the project, however, has amazed some of the natives and disgusted a few of the ardent Tydings people, much as they would like to see the bridge become a reality.

Also, the rPesident's visit has produced some extraordinary activities.

Just as the rPesident's decision was a hurried one—the Democratic primary takes place September 12—so are the preparations hurried.

A gang of 35 laborers, employes of the State roads commission, has arrived to clear a way for the White House party on its visit to the bridge site.

Road Is Bumpy.

It some cases it is a case of widening or smoothing a road; in others it is one of virtually making a road out of a cow path. The Secret Service men who came down today in a White House car must have had some jolly bumps.

But even with what has been done and will be done, the President will have to drive the last lap over a meadow and through a hole hurriedly cut through a patch of weeds. Then he will be able to see across the Potomac only because workmen have just chopped down a number of trees on the river bank.

Apparently Representative Lewis wasn't so well posted on the bridge plans when he announced last Saturday at La Plata that the President was coming down. He said the bridge would stretch from Morgantown to Dahlgren, Va. The Colonial Beach ferry starts out from here, but the Laidlow Ferry farm of the Matthews family is, as has been said, the proposed Maryland terminus. It is an historic spot, and in olden days felt the tread of George Washington as he prepared to cross on a ferry enroute to Fredericksburg and Williamsburg in Virginia.

Farmer to Be Host.

The Matthews farm now is being worked by Vernon Hardesty, a strapping young man who lives there with his wife and 17-months-old baby. They will be the President's hosts. The young farmer said today that he had not made up his mide as to which candidate he would vote for, but he ought to be a push-over for Lewis after he has been warmed by the Roosevelt smile. Hardesty and his father-in-law, Joseph Burroughs, were busy chopping tobacco and mowing hay when the workers of the State Roads Commission appeared and began felling trees so that the President might have a vista to Virginia.

President Roosevelt, on his way down here, will follow a route traveled by George Washington and other famous men, and by at least one outstanding villian. John Wilkes Booth fled down this way after the crime of '65.

Traveling through Prince Georges County, the President will encounter many Lewis adherents, However, once he gets into Charles County he will be in Tydings territory, and apparently nothing he will say or do will change it.

He'll See Tydings Banner

In La Plata, seat of Charles County, they are working overtime on a banner which will greet the President on Route 3. Huge letters on this banner will spell out the slogan, "Re-elect Tydings."

One man in this region wanted to print some signs saying, "Mr. President, Keep Out of Charles County." However, he was overruled.

"We don't want to be disrespectful to the President," said a Democratic leader in La Plata. "But he ought not to expect us to be very enthusiastic. As we see it, he is coming down here to tell us how to vote, and we don't like it. A lot of us are going fishing like he di din 1934."

He was referring to the 1934 celebration at St. Mary's City of the 300th anniversary of the arrival of the Ark and the Dove and the founding of Maryland. The Democrats in nearby St. Mary's County say that the date was changed so that the President could attend. Instead, they have complained, he went fishing.

History Abundant.

On the way from La Plata to Morgantown are a number of historic places, including Mount Republic, a colonial manor built in 1792 and occupied for a time during the Wilson Administration by Postmaster General Albert Burleson.

At Wayside the President will see Old Christ Church, founded in 1692. Beyond this, but out of sight, is Wolleston Manor, patented in 1642 by Capt. James Neale, "Commissioner of His Lordship's Treasury."

Here in Morgantown, the President will find a store with two gasoline pumps, four small tourist cabins and a few cottages occupied by Washingtonians. Thus far no welcome signs are being prepared. All that are in evidence now are beer signs.

Only one voter could be found here today. He was T. Reed Farr, who runs the estore. Farr is a friend of the manager of Davy Lewis' campaign. For that reason, and the added reason that he admires President Roosevelt, he is going to vote for Lewis.

"But I guess most of them down here are going to vote for Tydings," said Farr.

Mrs. Carrie R. Hott.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 1.—Funeral services for Mrs. Carrie Robinson Hott, widely known in the Virginia branch of the United Brethren Woman's Missionary Society, who died yesterday at her home in Dayton, will be held Friday afternoon from her home. Mrs. Hott was treasurer of the Virginia branch of the United Brethren Missionary Society for 11 years. Her husband, the late Rev. George P. Hott, was at one time head of Shenandoah Institute, now Shenandoah College, at Dayton.

Miss Clara J. Hartsock.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 1.—Miss Clara J. Hartsock, 49, died yesterday at Allegany Hospital of a heart attack. She was admitted July 18 suffering from back injuries received when she slipped while getting from her automobile at her home. Miss Hartsock, as executive secretary of the Associated Charities, was well known through the community. She was connected with the organization since 1911 and was the daughter of the late Capt. Henry H. Hartsock, who served in the Union Army.

Death Takes Star Of Beaux Arts Ball

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken, socially prominent art patron who has been the star of New York's Beaux Arts balls of the last decade, died today.

Her husband, an attorney, and her son, Arthur, a newsreel photographer, were at her bedside.

Mrs. Menken had been ill of a heart ailment since August 15.

Open Gaming At Va. Beach, Judge Charges

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne Courthouse, Va., Sept. 1 (AP).—Judge B. D. White, of of Princess Anne Circuit Court, today charged Virginia Beach officials with "liberal" enforcement of the law, asserted there had been open gambling at the resort this summer and threatened to keep a special grand jury in session all next summer in order that "we can have a faithful and impartial enforcement" of the State laws.

Judge White told the special grand jury he summoned to investigate gambling conditions at the resort that "widespread publicity given to the alleged wide open gambling which has been permitted at the beach" has placed the resort in a "very unfavorable light, and much could and should have been done to prevent such unpleasant notoriety."

347 MILES PER HOUR!
Another World Record Smashed by DUNLOP TIRES

Captain George Eyston, daring British speed king, who recently drove his Thunderbolt Racer 347 miles per hour—on Dunlops!

When speed champions set out to break records for velocity and endurance it is not surprising that they call on Dunlop to construct tires that will withstand the whip and strain of wheels that travel with bullet force. For Dunlop—the very creator of pneumatic tires—has led the world in tire science for 50 years and is constantly abreast of the growing need for greater tire safety and stamina. That is why you should use "Gold Cups"—the longest mileage tires Dunlop has ever built. "Gold Cups" actually beat first line standards 25%—cost less!

Pulitzer Play In Film Form Is Laugh Hit

Kaufman-Hart Comedy Has Everything in Eyes of Hollywood Scout.

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Sept. 1.—Today we saw a new movie, entitled "You Can't Take It With You," and we're almost scared to tell you about it.

The trouble seems to be that almost every time we go to the movies and see a show we like, the critics say it's punk. Usually when we are bored by a film, the experts say it's a masterpiece. This results in a lot of correspondence, mostly anonymous, and partly scurrilous. You'd be surprised—or maybe you wouldn't—how many folks think that as a movie critic we'd make a pretty good widgit maker.

So with that for an introduction, we're going to fall all the way overboard in favor of "You Can't Take It With You." It is by all odds the funniest film of the year, and we wouldn't be surprised if it weren't the most dramatic, as well.

At the preview, in a sound stage equipped with old-fashioned hard seats, the picture ran two hours and 10 minutes. We didn't squirm once. No film ever got such a tribute from us.

That Mad Vanderhof Tribe.

The show is Columbia Picture's version of the stage success of the same name, still running on Broadway after two years. It was produced and directed by Frank Capra, one of the best in the business, and it was performed by a cast including Jean Arthur, Lionel Barrymore, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Mischa Auer, Ann Miller, Spring Byington, Samuel S. Hinds, Donald Meek and H. B. Warner. Able actors every one.

The story is about a family which lives as it pleases, and the devil with being a success. The grandfather plays the harmonica. The husband manufactures fireworks in the cellar with disastrous results. The wife writes plays, because a typewriter was delivered to her by mistake eight years before.

The daughter takes dancing lessons, the son-in-law plays the xylophone, and the climax comes when the family tangles with one of the world's greatest financiers, his wife and son. That's enough of the plot here.

Picture Is a Lulu.

Most of the film was made at Columbia's ranch in the San Fernando Valley, where a replica of a street of brownstone houses in New York still remains. We were surprised a few weeks ago to walk onto the set and discover a full-fledged chunk of New York's elevated railroad rearing its ugly steel head. It was made of real steel, too; no papier mache railroad tracks for Capra.

The picture cost a fortune to make, but it undoubtedly will return its investment many times over. If we were Mr. Columbia, we'd offer the customers a money-back guarantee.

All of which seems to indicate we think this picture is a lulu. All we hope is that we haven't made another diagnostic mistake.

We're getting pretty tired of sulphurous letters scorching holes in our desk.

News which hardly belongs in a movie column concerns Reginald Denny, the movie-comedian and aviation-specialist. Denny, you know, is the funny man in all of the Bulldog Drummond detective films. Also, as you have read many a time before, he is a manufacturer of model airplanes.

Government Interested.

Until the present, these have been little more than super-toys, equipped with tiny gasoline engines and capable of sustained flight. Most of Denny's customers have been air-minded youngsters.

Now he has the United States Government for a client. After four years work he has developed a miniature airplane, controlled from the ground by radio, for use as a target. When it's 5,000 feet high, it looks to the gunners below as though it were a full-sized plane flying at a height of 10,000 feet. And so on.

It has a wingspread of 12 feet, carries a payload of 50 pounds and sells for $600. This is cheap for an aerial target. Fact is, the Army marksmen haven't had real airplanes to shoot at since the World War and they're getting a little rusty. They're anxious for Denny to speed up production.

He's rushing it fast as he can. His seems to be an ideal business. Every time he sells the Army a plane, he's pretty certain it will be ruined immediately upon delivery, and that his client will be wanting another one.

A Good Word or Two Is Spoken for Kong

That Fellow Who Wouldn't Let Well Enough Alone Is Real Villain; Notes on 'Kiss the Boys Goodbye.'

By Gerald G. Gross,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

UST a few words, if you please, in behalf of a gorilla.

For King Kong wasn't such a bad egg. That was the conclusion I drew on the occasion of our first introduction some five years ago and, when the acquaintance was resumed day before yesterday in the Warner Bros. screening room, I became finally convinced that Kong was done very wrong by, indeed.

King Kong kills many people in the motion picture, named in his honor, which is being revived at the Metropolitan. Yet until Robert Armstrong came along, the ape had gone along serenely minding his own business, doing no greater harm to living things than knocking off a dinosaur or, perhaps, a pterodactyl now and then.

All that human blood that's spilt is on Mr. Armstrong's hands, not Kong's. Not Mr. Armstrong personally, that is, but the adventurer named Denham whom he impersonates in the picture. For all his 60-foot size and his terrifying countenance, it is apparent that Kong was a softy at heart, a lonely creature craving but a little tenderness. Certainly by his careful handling of Miss Fay Wray—observe that she never bears even the slightest contusion during the entire course of the picture—Kong demonstrates that he was no roughneck.

Sympathetic treatment undoubtedly could have made a useful, law-abiding citizen out of Kong. It is a shame he had to die, yet, with the glorious death that Hollywood condescended to give him, it cannot be said that he passed away ignominiously. The real pity of "King Kong" is that that cad Denham did not get his just deserts.

Fie upon you, Denham! Not only were you the first to begin running when your ape broke his bonds in the Broadway theater, not only did you, a man of money, take Miss Wray to a greasy one-arm lunchroom, but, worst of all, you failed to make pictures of that prehistoric reptile's charge right after explaining that you'd been turning your own crank ever since a subordinate cameraman had shied at a rhinoceros.

Clare Booth's new comedy, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," should go over well in Washington, Producer Brock Pemberton believes, because of its concern with the differences in thought and manners between the North and South. "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" is scheduled to open at Henry Miller's in New York on September 28, following a week's stay in the Capital.

• • • •

Entrants in the movie quiz contest, and others, too, for that matter, who are wondering what next week's films will be, take heed.

"Hold That Co-Ed" follows "Three Loves Has Nancy" at the Capitol, beginning September 9. A screwball comedy, it features Mr. and Mrs. John Barrymore, George Murphy, Marjorie Weaver, Jack Haley and others.

Simultaneously the Earle will launch "Racket Busters," bringing together Humphrey Bogart, George Brent and Gloria Dickson in a melodrama undoubtedly inspired by Dewey's successes in New York City.

When "Alexander's Ragtime Band" marches out of the Palace, its successor will be the vaunted "Marie Antoinette."

The week of September 9 will bring "Army Girl," a dramatic story of life at a U. S. Cavalry post, with Madge Evans in the title role, to the Metropolitan. "Carefree," upon the close of its run at RKO-Keith's, will be followed by "Youth Takes a Fling," with Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds and Grant Mitchell.

The new Atlas Theater will have another opening tomorrow. Although there was a formal dedication and launching Wednesday night, a special children's "premiere" has been scheduled for tomorrow's first matinee. "A feature picture of particular appeal to young people, a serial and numerous surprises are promised for the entertainment of the house's most important patronage," Boss Charles H. Olive informs this department.

Trimmins'—A paragraph of "filler" slipped into Wednesday's page in which Janet Gaynor was described as an "ultra modern, sophisticated girl in "Three Loves Has Nancy" . . . actually she is just the opposite . . . extremely old-fashioned and unsophisticated . . . Raymond Massey and the Queen Mary dock in New York Labor Day morning, the former to begin rehearsals in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" . . . cheer up, those of you who missed the first episode of the Dick Tracy serial at the Columbia . . . both No. 1 and No. 2 will be shown at the first show tomorrow . . . doors open at 10:15 a. m. . . . Tom Kilpatrick, producer, announces that Baltimoreans Louis E. Shecter and Norman Clark will have their comedy "Window Shopping" on the stage this fall.

Norma Shearer's Latest Film Is Record for Time Spent

Out Hollywood way there's one sure sign of genius. That's the demand for time—and plenty of it—for their picture-making. And now along comes "Marie Antoinette," Norma Shearer's latest film, with more "time" to its credit than any movie production yet attempted.

Up to date, it is four years since the project of adapting Stefan Zweig's best selling biography of the famous French queen, was first begun. Delays have been numerous. Costume sketches had just been completed when it was announced that Miss Shearer was expecting a child. After that, the production was again put off when it was learned that Charles Laughton's commitments in England would not permit him to do the role of Louis XVI. Then, as shooting was about to begin for the third time there came the news of Irving Thalberg's tragic death.

In the meantime however, the "Marie Antoinette" staff had been working steadily and the picture is now on view. This is one film, at least, where genius cannot grumble that it wasn't given enough time.

And from what we hear, the lapses will justify themselves. Produced by Hunt Stromberg the film is being directed by the brilliant W. S. Van Dyke 2d. The cast itself glitters with names—Tyrone Power as the Queen's lover, Count Axel de Fersen, Robert Morley as Louis XVI (there was a two-year search to fill this role, John Barrymore as the elder Louis, Anita Louise as the Princesse de Lamballe, Joseph Schildkraut as the Duc d'Orleans, and a score of others.

Of special interest to the women is the fact that Miss Shearer's wardrobe consists of 34 gowns and 18 wigs, conceived by Adrian, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer designer, whose trip through France and Austria last summer inspired many of the creations.

"Marie Antoinette" is coming to Loew's Palace on Friday, September, 9.

HollywoodSeesAll, Says Vincent Price

"That Hollywood grapevine," says Vincent Price, "is the most startling thing I've found in California, and that old one about goldfish-bowl privacy is not joke. All of a sudden, everybody seems to be minding my business."

Price, who recently arrived from Broadway to co-star with Constance Bennett in Universal's "Service De Luxe," declares he heard about his first camera call from two mysterious sources eight hours before the official summons came from the studio.

Omar KiamChosen Costume Designer

Omar Kiam, noted fashion designer, has been borrowed from Samuel Goldwyn to create Billie Burke's costumes in Hal Roach's "Topper Takes a Trip." Kiam last year originated the wardrobes for "The Adventures of Marco Polo" and "The Goldwyn Follies."

Such a Girl Is Nancy!

ROBERT MONTGOMERY DRAWS JANET GAYNOR.
From the prostrate and distinctly upset figure of the masseuse whom the former sent to Nancy (Miss Gaynor) as a favor, only to find out that the small town girl thought a masseuse was an assailant. A scene from "Three Loves Has Nancy," opening at the Capitol today.

Sinclair to Direct Luise Rainer Film

Following the success of his first directorial effort for motion pictures, "Woman Against Woman," Robert Sinclair has been given the important assignment to direct "Dramatic School" which stars Luise Rainer, for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Sinclair, who first distinguished himself in Hollywood as a director of Sid Grauman's West Coast production of "Once in a Lifetime," has headlined such Broadway successes as "Dodsworth," "The Postman Always Rings Twice" and "Babes in Arms."

"Dramatic School" presents the lives of students of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Acting in Budapest. Merwyn LeRoy produces.

In Hollywood
With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Sept. 1.—The other day on the Deanna Durbin set, Director Eddie Ludwig had dismissed the cast for lunch when Producer Joe Pasternak, all in a dither, sent for him and brought him back. Eddie, arriving breathless, asked, "What is it . . . what's the matter?"

HEDDA HOPPER

"We're in an awful spot," said Joe. "At the finish we've got Deanna Durbin sitting down drinking punch . . . she's got to stand up."

"Well, that's easy," said Eddie. "Have her get up and propose a toast."

"But what?"

"Bottoms up, of course," giggled Eddie.

Producer Brynie Foy helped his young daughter entertain her girl friends. When the party began to sag, Brynie stepped out and started giving imitations of well-known radio personalities, with kiddies guessing who they were. Bing Crosby, Rudy Vallee and Dick Powell were okayed. But when he said: "Now, who's back in a flash with a flash!" They all yelled together: "Flash Gordon."

Yes, it's true that Jack Oakie's option wasn't lifted at RKO. But he wasn't satisfied with his parts. There's a deal on for him to sign with Eddie Small to do a series of small town comedies opposite Zazu Pitts, which is welcome news for all of us.

And those producers who were not only slow, but dumb in not keeping Una Merkel working all the time, are now standing in line trying to get her since she signed for that air show to play opposite Charlie Ruggles. They should also know that Madge Evans has been getting $1,000 a week and a bonus playing in summer stock.

Rosa Ponselle's test at Metro was swell. If they sign her she'll be one of eight prima donnas under contract—that includes all studios. A year ago there were at least 80.

I hear that Liz Whitney, who knows horses from head to tail and can ride bareback, is being considered for a Western. That's all right, but Liz looks a little too aristocratic for horse opera. She's also coaching for a test at another major studio, not Metro. There's a society girl who works.

Those who missed Flagstad at the Bowl skipped the thrill of a lifetime. She's one of the real people of the universe. Travels, not with a retinue, but her husband and accompanist. Won't talk about herself, except to say: "I can't tell you how I'm looking forward to next year, when I will retire to my home in Norway and live the rest of my life in peace and quiet."

You wouldn't know her husband had a penny, yet he owns a string of banks in Norway. She's given of that golden voice for 25 years and deserves a rest.

Otto Klemperer directed, not with pyrotechnics, but with such ease that one forgets he's probably the greatest Wagnerian student of our day.

Flagstad drew the greatest number of celebrities seen at the Bowl this season. Miriam Hopkins and Anatole Litvak with a party of eight, including Ronnie Colman and Benita Hume, Lili Damita with Walter Pidgeon, Lili wearing the cutest hat—I wanted to snitch it right off her head—of the doll variety with ostrich feathers forming a tree sitting on top. I can't for the life of me see why Lili isn't grabbed for the movies.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Mayer with Daughter Edith Goets in a stunning white sports coat and hat. I chatted with Harry Lachman, who soon leaves for France and is enthusiastic to direct pictures there. Gwen Behr, David Manners and Daphne Martin, daughter of the late Dr. Frank Crane, who never admitted he was a writer—called himself a reformed minister, because for 20 years he occupied a pulpit in Worcester, Mass. Two boxes full of musical socialites, who had flown from San Francisco.

Some of our Hollywood boys and girls, fed up with our usual nightspots, decided to go down to the Black and Tan on Central avenue. On entering they were warned that cover charge would be 25 cents. "Why?" they asked.

"Oh, just to keep out undesirables."

Republic has offered M. G. M. $100,000 for Jimmy Stewart for "Wagons Westward." Metro turned it down. Jimmy would have to be a sextet to do all the parts offered him.

He Doubles in Volts.

Jack Roper, who once "beat the tars" off Patsy Peroni, who is considered one of the best heavyweight fighters on the Pacific Coast, works as an electrician at Universal Studio, currently "juicing" "The Last Express," the fifth of the Crime Club series. Roper, famous for his terrific lefthand jabs, takes on all comers on Sundays and holidays.

Loew Promises Many Big Hits For Its 1938-39 Film Season

'Three Loves Has Nancy,' at Capitol Today, Opens Drive That Will Bring 'Marie Antoinette,' 'Northwest Passage' and Other Great Ones.

The local premiere of "Three Loves Has Nancy," at Loew's Capitol today will officially launch the opening of the 1938-39 movie season at all Loew theaters here.

"Marie Antoinette" was to have lifted the lid at Loew's Palace Theater, but this magnificent film will be delayed for another week as Washingtonians crowd the Palace for another week of "Alexander's Ragtime Band," without doubt one of screendom's happiest hits.

"Marie Antoinette" was originally scheduled for road show engagement, but these plans were canceled by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer so that this picture might be available as a spectacular curtain raiser for the new entertainment season.

"Three Loves Has Nancy," was not to have been released for several weeks, but M-G-M accelerated its release so that this hilarious romance might introduce the new movie year with considerable cheer. Janet Gaynor, Robert Montgomery and Franchot Tone form the trio that romps blithely through the merry mixup of "Three Loves Has Nancy." Norma Shearer and Tyrone Power head a distinguished cast in "Marie Antoinette." Included are John Barrymore, Robert Morley, Anita Louise, Joseph Schildkraut and numerous others.

Production at Peak.

The entertainment year 1938-39 promises to be a memorable one for a number of reasons. This year the theaters and producers have joined together to celebrate "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year." Studios are working full blast. Hollywood production has hit a new peak, as the producers are rushing through a series of outstanding pictures for early fall release to make good the promise of their slogan. A $250,000 movie quiz contest is also being launched to further intrigue the public interest in the new season films.

Theater-goers will win a $50,000 first prize and 4,999 other prizes to make up the contest total, by answering a series of questions based on the new pictures. Quiz books are being distributed now, without charge, at all Loew Theaters.

The pictures, many of which are ready now, provide an impressive line-up. The new season schedule announced today by Eastern Divisional Manager Carter Barron, will bring many of the leading stars of the screen to the local Loew houses during September and the early fall season.

"In all my years in show business," said Mr. Barron, "I do not recall any new season film schedule which promised so much real entertainment."

Best Sellers Included.

"Starting with 'Three Loves Has Nancy' and following with 'Marie Antionette,' Loew's will offer a series of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount pictures in order:

"Spencer Tracy, last year's academy award winner, will be co-starred with Mickey Rooney in 'Boys Town.' Both these stars are current favorites and the combination is sure to be a popular one.

"Luise Rainer, who also received the Academy Award, will be seen with Fernand Gravet and the new Viennese discovery, Miliza Korjus, in 'The Great Waltz,' a new musical based on the story and songs of Johann Strauss. Then, in contrast to the sentimental music of 'The Great Waltz' will come 'Honolulu,' a 1938 swingtime musical revue with Eleanor Powell and an all-star cast.

"An M-G-M company is now on location in the Rockies completing scenes for 'Northwest Passage,' based on Kenneth Roberts' best-seller, which will feature Spencer Tracy and Robert Taylor in the leading roles of an outdoor drama. Another famous novel, A. J. Cronin's 'The Citadel,' will also arrive on Loew's screen during the fall season, with Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell in the leading roles. After these will come Joan Crawford, starring in 'The Shining Hour,' based on the famous Broadway production.

Sonja Has New Beau.

"From United Artists, Loew's has arranged for early showings of 'The Young in Heart,' with Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Paulette Goddard and Roland Young, and similarly titled 'There Goes My Heart,' with Fredric March and Virginia Bruce.

"Sabu, the youngster who was such a remarkable success in 'Elephant Boy,' is returning to the screen in the leading role of another adventure of India, 'Drums.' Gary Cooper will be the cowboy in 'The Cowboy and the Lady,' with Merle Oberon. Carole Lombard and James Stewart are co-starred in 'Made for Each Other.'

"Paramount will contribute "Spawn of the North," a dramatic sensation, and other formidable pictures.

"The Twentieth Century-Fox has in store another bountiful crop of screen beauties. On their way to Loew screens are the looney Ritz Brothers in their latest hilarity, "Straight, Place and Show," a story authored by Damon Runyon and with Ethel Merman, George Barbier and others adding to the fun and melodies. Sonja Henie with her new beau, Richard Green in "My Lucky Star," with Cesar Romero, George Barbier, Budy Ebsen, Barnett Parker and dozens of others; "Suez," Darryl Zanuck's most ambitious production, with Loretta Young, Tyrone Power, Annabella and others; Shirley Temple in "Just Around the Corner;" an all-star cast in "Hold That Co-Ed" ideally made for the football season ahead, and many, many others.

"With all these excellent productions to back up the industry's other concerted efforts, the new movie year at Loew's will be the biggest yet," concluded Mr. Barron.

Carter Barron Turns Nipups Over New Fare

Loew's Chief in This Area Confident That Season Will Be the Best.

There've been rumblings and rumors of the thousands of dollars in contest prizes and other big things the movie industry has planned for its 1938-39 season. So listen to Carter Barron of Loew's for the facts.

"I made a new season forecast for you last year," said Barron, "and I believe it was an optimistic one. In fact, I know it was optimistic because I've been making optimistic new season forecasts now for years! And what's happened? Every one of my optimistic, pollyanna predictions has come true! Each year pictures have gotten better; each year, the most harassed, most booted-about, most lambasted industry in the world has shaken off the banter of its friends and enemies and gone forward to bigger and finer things!

"The closing year has seen a lot of good pictures. Somehow, a fad sprang up this summer to point out the bad ones and forget the good ones. But obviously, the fans weren't fooled by the hubbub, because they went to the good ones and stayed away from the bad. They're awfully smart that way.

Outlook Is Bright.

"But how's about 1938-39?

"Again, I view with no alarm. I make my living in this business and I'm glad to say it looks pretty secure for the next 12 months. So sure is the entire industry of a big year ahead—last year wasn't so bad, either, compared to other businesses!—that producers, distributors and exhibitors have gotten together, for the first time, to celebrate the opening of this new season. A Nation-wide campaign to put our best foot forward has been launched.

Now I'll get back on my job and tell you exclusively about good old Loew's. With the productions of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists, Twentieth Century Fox and Paramount to pick from, Loew's is in its usually good shape.

"A season that will start off with "Three Loves Has Nancy" and "Marie Antoinette" sets a fast pace at the barrier! "Marie Antoinette" as you know is going to be released at popular prices instead of road-showed (except at the Astor Theater, New York.) The movie fans, I think, should like "Marie Antoinette" a lot.

Tracy and Rooney Click.

"With the exception of a few of the epic productions for contrast, there seems to be a trend toward the so-called "down-to-earth" movies; stories of everyday people; modern backgrounds; tales of today's heroes and today's novels, plays, etc.

"For instance, 'Too Hot to Handle," with Clark Gable and Myrna Loy, is a story of the newsreel boys. Haven't seen it—but the Coast says its dynamite.

"You'll notice I've gotten this far without mentioning "Gone With the Wind." How's that for restraint?

"I saw some scenes from "Boys Town." That Spencer Tracy-Mickey Rooney combination is sure to click hard.

"Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell sound like a good pair in "The Citadel," which, by the way, is still one, two, three among the "best sellers." The picture is being made in the M-G-M studios in England.

"Joan Crawford in "The Shining Hour"—without Franchot. "Out West With the Hardys"—with the beloved Hardy family cast. There's some kind of commentary in that—the commonplace Hardy family suddenly becoming one of the biggest "stars" on the screen! "Love Finds Andy Hardy," actually beat pictures like "Captain Courageous!" You figure it out!

Many Hits on Way.

"The fans would tear down the theaters if we didn't give 'em a Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy picture at least once a year. So "Sweethearts," in Technicolor, will probably save millions of dollars worth of theater property—but wear out a lot of seats.

From United Artists we look forward especially to "The Young in Heart," which brings Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Roland Young to Loew's screen in the very near future. "The Cowboy and the Lady," starring Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon, and "Made for Each Other," with Carole Lombard and James Stewart, are also included in the fall schedule of this producer. Hal Roach's first United Artists production, "There Goes My Heart," with Fredric March, Virginia Bruce and Patsy Kelly, will be one of the new season's romantic comedies, and Sabu, the remarkable boy star of "The Elephant Boy," will be seen in a new dramatic spectacle of India, "Druma," an all-Technicolor production. I've seen "Drums"; real movie entertainment.

So I say 1938-39 looks like a good year and will uphold that slogan, "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment"—at any price!

'Marie Antoinette' Boasts Statistics That Stagger One

Here are the facts about "Marie Antoinette" that make it the most entertaining and fabulous motion picture in Hollywood history.

A cast of 152 players, starring Norma Shearer and Tyrone Power, and featuring Gladys George, John Barrymore, Robert Morley, Joseph Schildkraut and Anita Louise.

Four years of research and preparation.

Furnishings of the Louis XIV, XV and XVI periods, antiques and art objects of priceless beauty, brought from Europe by Ed Wills, head of the property department.

Brought to the screen by Hunt Stromberg, whose long list of outstanding successes include "The Firefly," "Maytime," "The Great Ziegfeld," "The Thin Man," "Naughty Marietta," "Rose Marie," "Night Must Fall" and "Ah, Wilderness."

Directed by W. S. Van Dyke 2d, who has formed one of Hollywood's most successful director-producer teams with Stromberg.

Among Forthcoming Attractions of Loew's 1938-39 Season

Pete Smith Enters As Picnic Kibitzer

Camped beside beautiful Malibu Lake, in the High Sierras, Miss Penny, aided by Smith's comments, shows how a delicious warm meal of fried fish, vegetables, corn-on-the-cob, fluffy biscuits, creamy dessert, and clear tasty coffee may be prepared as easily and quickly as the usual bacon and beans.

Will Jason directs the short, Phillip Terry, Sally Payne, Hooper, Atchley, and Harry Tyler, support Miss Penny, the Home Economics Editor of the Los Angeles Examiner.

Grid Spectating Benchley's Latest

Beating the gun on moaning gridiron enthusiasts, Robert Benchley started his new series of outdoor comedies with "How to Watch Football."

From a seat high in the Los Angeles Coliseum, Benchley takes in a grid contest, heckled by inebriates, the passing of refreshments, unwelcome camaraderie of fellow enthusiasts, and finally by a rainstorm.

'Vacation From Love.'

Success of Dennis O'Keefe and Edward Brophy in their first screen appearance as a team has led to the signing of Brophy for an important role in "Vacation From Love," which features Florence Rise and O'Keefe. George Fitzmaurice directs.

New Short Series By Radio Observer Begun by Metro

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newest short series, John Nesbitt's "Passing Paradise," is under way.

The new short series, which will have the longest production schedule, 15 days, ever alloted any short, is under the direction of Basil Wrangel.

Dealing with strange happenings and rare occurrences in the world, nine episodes are to be filmed immediately. These nine episodes will comprise three two-reel shorts, three episodes making up one two-reeler.

Tracy-Rooney Combination Is 'Boys Town' Hit

Film for Palace Is Based on Real Life Story of Nebraska Hamlet.

"Boys Town," M-G-M's drama based on the real-life story of Boys Town, Nebr., will have its premiere at Loew's Palace soon.

Spencer Tracy, who was awarded the 1937 Motion Picture Academy Award for his forthright performance in "Captains Courageous," has a similarly sympathetic role in "Boys Town." As Father Flannagan, he defies the existing penal system of an entire State and founds Boys Town as a refuge and reclamation for delinquent youngsters.

Mickey Rooney, last seen in the highly entertaining "Love Finds Andy Hardy," has the part of Whitey, a boy slated for life imprisonment. This swing from comedy to drama undoubtedly did not bother snub-nosed Mickey, who has successfully lent his versatile talents to such varying roles as Puck in Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," or as a typical girl-crazy adolescent in his later films.

His opportunity to act in the same picture with Spencer Tracy gratifies his outspoken and much-publicized desire.

Henry Hull, veteran stage and screen performer, together with youngster Gene Reynolds, who was called by Walter Huston "the best child actor in Hollywood," head the large supporting cast of "Boys Town."

"Boys Town" was produced in Nebraska, in the actual locale of Father Flannagan's institution. This realistic setting, and the caliber of its performers, should make "Boys Town" one of the most important dramas of the year.

Bainter Joins Crawford.

Fay Bainter, who recently scored in "Mother Carey's Chickens," has joined Joan Crawford and Margaret Sullavan in their co-starred picture, "The Shinning Hour" at M-G-M. She will play the spinster sister of a Wisconsin farm family in this filmization of Keith Winter's Broadway stage success.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Learning of Husband's Reputed Long-Time Interest in Another Woman, Wife Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the first time in my life, I am confronted by a problem which I cannot solve by myself. I have just recently discovered that my husband has been associating for several years with a girl he met through his work. I do not know the nature of their relationship, except that she comes n to see him at his place of business, that he has taken her places, that he is now seeing her quite often, and that he has kept sums of money from me and stayed away unnecessarily. I have tried to discuss the situation with him but he denies everything.

* * * *

I have been trying to decide what to do. I could manage to be down at his office when this woman comes to see him—not with the idea of severing the association but for the purpose of trying to estimate the nature of their relationship, since my husband seems bent on keeping it a secret. Yet I hesitate to do this, as you may well understand. It is useless to threaten my husband that I could prove the association. For one thing, I have never carried out a threat; and for another, whatever could be proved, if anything, would be detrimental to him in a business way.

* * * *

In case I sound as though I don't care as much as I should, I beg to tell you that such is not the case. I have always been a faithful and devoted wife, even in the face of temptation which was not of my making. I find myself lying awake nights, worrying about this problem. I feel I must know the truth. Please advise me. READER.

* * * *

Refrain From Prying.

DEAR READER: Suppose you found yourself in a situation where you suspected the existence, in an adjoining darkened room, of an open powder keg. Would you go looking for it with a lighted match? I trust not; for I am afraid if the thing existed which you supposed, that disaster and discovery would descend simultaneously. Leave the powder keg alone and you largely obviate its power to destroy; tamper with it and you invite an explosion that is apt to be catastrophic.

* * * *

Whatever the nature of your husband's association with the mysterious other woman, so long as he is willing to keep the whole business a secret from you, it offers no serious threat to your marital security. By his categorical denial of the "situation's" existence, he is, I daresay, seeking to protect your marriage from the explosion that he fears would inevitably result if you knew the truth; which gesture, of itself, argues that he believes the marriage is worth preserving. Unless you are ready and willing to risk the break-up of your marriage, or crushing personal humiliation, I think you had better assist him in maintaining his earnest subterfuge (if such it is).

* * * *

That it is a subterfuge, I have no doubt. If the relationship were not colored with indiscretion, there would be nothing about it which, in his opinion, necessitated apology or concealment, and he would have met your accusations with chiding laughter and explanatory details. Yet if, as one supposes, indiscretion exists, it is not altogether to your husband's discredit that he refuses to discuss it with you.

* * * *

Granted that a man is falling from choicest standards of grace in flirting or philandering behind his wife's back, he hasn't hit bottom so long as he keeps a decent reticence, even with his wife, concerning his relations with so-called "other women," and so long as he feels sufficiently protective toward his wife to wish to spare her the knowledge of his human frailties. Only a most utter cad tells one woman—even when that woman is his wife—the details of his peccadillos with other women. So, as I say, it is not altogether fair to suppose that your husband is brutally adding insult to injury in keeping a still tongue in his head in this instance. If the truth could be had from him, he would probably testify that, according to his lights, he was doing the best he could by everybody involved in a bad situation.

* * * *

Of course, you may say—and it is a logical reaction—that what he could do and should do is give up the other woman. And so he should. And he probably will, eventually, if you let him play out the hand along his own lines. But if you attempt to force his hand, you may (and probably will) lose every potentially winning card you now hold. If you are interested in preserving the status quo of your family life; if you wish to hold your husband, to continue as his wife and the mistress of his home, it is far better to let him suffer from secret remorse than it is to push him to the point where his reaction is one of open defiance.

* * * *

Authorities on human behavior tell us that the wisest course open to a wife who suspects her husband of infidelity (supposing she wishes to triumph over her rival) is that of blandly ignoring her rival's existence, while making her own personality more attractive and interesting. Reproaches, accusations, spying and prying only widen the breach, whereas devoted wifely blindness is calculated to heal the breach and reinforce the marital relationship with a greater husbandly devotion, a deeper appreciation, than existed before.

* * * *

Whether a wife is victor or vanquished in such a situation depends largely on her stupidity or adroitness in dealing with her husband's secret sense of guilt in such matters. Left alone, it will drive him home, eager to compensate for his erstwhile laxity; but prodded and played upon, it is likely to cause him to fear, detest, avoid and possibly eventually desert his tormentor. M. H.

Fruit Shortcakes Will Be Theme of New Post Contest

Fresh fruit shortcakes will serve as the theme for next week's recipe contest. Whether peaches, fresh pineapple or berries are your favorite shortcake topping, you are eligible to enter. With new fruits creeping into the markets, and with old reliables such as apples and bananas always on hand, the variety of new fruits should give your recipe an air of distinction.

All recipes must be carefully written out and tested. Remember that occasionally worth while entries must be discarded because of illegibility. Mail all entries to Alice Clayton, Post Food Editor, before September 3. Your reward for a prompt contribution may entitle you to one of three cash awards, which include, first prize of $3, second of $2, and three additional prizes of $1 each.

Nail Heads Aid Figure Flattery

IT'S THE DETAIL in clothes that counts this season. Trimmings are used in adroit ways to dramatize the lines of dresses, as witness the cocktail dress shown above. This is a smoky gray sheer wool with gleaming silver nail heads, each of which has been applied individually. Note how the nail heads define the softly draped bodice and emphasize the slight flare of the skirt. This interesting combination of sheer wool and gleaming nail heads make this dress especially suitable for all those semi-formal occasions such as luncheons, cocktails and restaurant dining in which Washington abounds.

CONSUMERS COUNSEL

Three Cleansing Agents Recommended for Stained Clothing.

MORE inquiries asking advice on household management than any one other question have been received recently by the Consumers' Counsel. With back-to-school problems confronting busy mothers their main concern at present is how to cope with the stain and spot situation. The following suggestions may lighten these spotty domestic burdens.

Three good cleansing agents for garments and linens are indorsed not only by the counsel, but also by the United States Bureau of Home Economics. Sodium perborate, although it works slowly, is gentle and consequently excellent for removing spots on linen, white cotton, rayon or silk. Javelle water is more rapid and has very much the same vigorous effectiveness as oxalic acid, although the latter is poisonous to humans, but not to garments. Chlorine bleaches must be used with caution due to their speed of action.

Carbon tetracide is splendid for removing grease and oil stains and is found indispensable for households boasting mechanics or radio engineers, whose monkey suits are notoriously grease-laden. Glycerine is recommended for dissolving tannin, for that is the root of much fruit stain evil. By telephoning Alice Clayton, Post Food editor, additional information will be gladly given to anxious homemakers on other spot, stain or garment marks' trouble.

Good Will Policy.

One of the counsel's most helpful and informative letters received recently was from Mrs. Sara Lee Orange, 2025 I street northwest. Her request concerning Household Hints has been answered in the preceding suggestions. And as to her desire for weekly domestic advice it has for some time been the counsel's desire to incorporate many of these useful bits of information on weekly food pages. Her letter follows:

DEAR MISS CLAYTON: Because I happen to be a daily reader of The Post and particularly your page, may I offer a suggestion for the grand and enjoyable Friday page you present? I derive many benefits and satisfaction from what the readers have to say, so, as an added feature, why not include a column of timely household hints? I am of the opinion housewives like myself are continuously on the alert for helpful suggestions that will lighten the burden of their numerous tasks.

It is my good fortune to possess quite a large collection of really helpful hints, and I am especially proud of a group that I have that dates all the way back to 1879! I feel that many of your regular readers would welcome most of them because of their "sure-fredness," and because they are not in the least complicated or difficult to utilize. I'd be more than happy to pass them on from time to time. To arouse more interest (if you deemed it wise) operate the column on a weekly basis, first, as you do the food contests, judge the numerous replies you no doubt would receive on the basis of originality, neatness and cleverness. You might even offer a prize for the best, those you would select for print in the Friday Food Page column. No doubt, by rewarding the winners, it would add zest to the program. That, Miss Clayton, is merely a suggestion from an interested and enthusiastic reader of your page. I wish you continued success in your fine work.

MRS. SARA LEE ORANGE.

Vegetable Pie.

DEAR MISS CLAYTON: My wife and I read your menus each day and use them to advantage as you have some very good suggestions. Have you a recipe for sweet potato pie? If I remember right, it was made something like a pumpkin pie. As a kid how I liked them, but I guess sweet potato pies are out of style. Thanking you for the information if you can give it to me.

JAMES E. LOWE.

SWEET POTATO SOUFFLE PIE.

Boil and mash 4 sweet potatoes; there should be 1 pint. Add 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons powdered sugar and cream to moisten. Beat thoroughly. Add ½ cup broken peanuts, 1-3 cup seeded raisins and fold in 2 egg whites, beaten stiff. Pile lightly in your favorite pie crust pastry, sprinkle with 1½ tablespoons melted butter and bake at 350 degrees F. until puffed and brown.

Slim Waistlines An Urgent Need For Fall Frocks

By Ida Jean Kain.

PARIS SAYS that waistlines are to be lower this fall and narrower, which seems to indicate that the couturiers are under the impression you have been taking your exercises and are now slimmer in the waist.

This insistence on waistline slimness is recurrently surprising to the woman whose ideas of fashions and figures were largely molded by the great emancipation era—a time when waistlines were draped about the hips and girdles became something to hold up the stockings.

No doubt this was a much healthier style than the pinched-in waists of a prior fashion, yet there is nothing unhealthy about a fashion that credits you with using your good strong waistline muscles! And if you are concerned over your failure to grow slimmer this summer, you can quickly make amends because anyone willing to work can take from 2 to 3 inches off the waist in one month.

Position: Sitting on low chair, legs wide apart and straight out in front, hands on the hips, back perfectly straight.

Movement: Pivot at the waist without bending the back or letting the chin poke forward. Bend down to the left, circle down across the thighs, up to the right, and return to the sitting position. Make wide circles with the trunk, holding the tummy up and bending over to the side as far as possible.

Wall climbing is another rapid-slimming measure for the waistline. Get down on the floor on the back with hips close to the wall. Then, with weight resting on the shoulders walk the feet up the wall until the body is in a straight line from feet to chest.

Use the old reliable wall bicycle to firm and flatten the lower abdominal wall. Here it is:

Position: Lying on the back, trunk at right angles to the wall, buttocks against the wall and one leg extended up the wall, the other bent back with thigh resting on abdomen and chest.

Movement: Using a piston-like movement, shove alternate legs up the wall, resting the other leg on the chest. As soon as you are able to do this exercise rhythmically, you can make it more effective by extending the arms straight back on the floor in rhythm with the leg movement.

Clothes Dramatic When Topped Off By Brazen Ribbons

Paris (U.P.).—Ribbons played dramatic roles as the curtain went up on the midseason styles. There was hardly a dress (hat or coat, too) which could not attribute part of its chic to the subtle or brazen placement of a ribbon.

Plaid taffeta ribbon in red, green and white—the kind you used to wear in your hair—was used as a crushed girdle separating one of Schiaparelli's black shantung skirts from its white crepe blouse. Over blouse, ribbon and skirt was a black shantung bolero. And at the same house a simple brown grosgrain ribbon was given the honor of tying a short mink cape at the neck.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Sept. 1.

THERE ARE blondes and blondes, and we brunettes, who view the breed with fear and sometimes a spot of envy, usually pass by on the other side, hissing faintly. But when one of the world's leading honey-heads, who is also a noted world figure as a dream girl of the silver screen, comes to town, it is up to every girl reporter to pocket her petty jealousies and rally round. That's why a visit to Madeleine Carroll was really a pleasant duty.

ALICE HUGHES.

This British belle, as far as I can detect, is as beauteous a creature of her ilk as is now in active practice. Her skin is of the finest English type—tops for that coloring in all the world and her blonde hair is worn down, as she likes, and not up and curled out of shape, as MM. Emile, Jacques, Henri and Alphonse say they like it. The heck with them, is the general idea.

When I witnessed La Carroll she had just returned from France, where as a Hollywood diplomat, she persuaded that touchy nation to permit the showing of "Blockade," in which she starred with Henry "Sad-Pan" Fonda. Her diplomacy worked, but what Frenchmen could stand up against a diplomat as gorgeous as Madeleine? None, obviously. She was on her way to Hollywood for a radio date with Master Charles McCarthy, and then to pick up what good film jobs came her way, for the girl is a free-lance at the moment.

* * * *

"I turned down the chance to play opposite Robert Donat in 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips' in London," she said, "because of the taxes." The income tariff is a tremendous burden on British troupers who work both sides of the Atlantic, which is why we see nothing of Donat, Charles Laughton or little Mr. Arliss any more. But Madeleine evidently prefers our side of the pond for toil, and we are very glad of it. Especially the boys. Ask Papa, if you dare!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Gladys Kiplinger is a nice local business girl who has suddenly turned to building small houses in the nearby country—renting or selling them—and then building another. I visited her newest last Sunday—a doll house set in a corner of an apple orchard about 80 miles from town. She says she loses interest when the house is done—her joy is in the planning and creating. The whole outfit I saw—land, building, furnishings, heat and refrigeration—cost her less than $5,000. Of course, you couldn't have the folks visit you for a spell—which might be precisely the reason you'd like Gladys' small house . . .

This Type of Meal Can Be Prepared Well in Advance.

Few Foods Afford Such a Wide Variety of Treatment.

By Alice Clayton,
The Post Food Editor.

SUMMER-SCORCHED appetites blossom into life around Labor Day, and present problems to the hostess who is methodical about seasonable menu planning. Labor Day, this year, should symbolize quite the reverse of what its name implies, for during this one brief holiday, the homemaker should be completely relieved of kitchen responsibility. Families planning vacations this week-end may find their appetites sharpened by shore or mountain air, but they will want to shun the attendant persecution of cumbersome meals.

One of the most satisfactory holiday foods, not only during the free Labor Day siesta, but at all seasons, is cheese, for this rich food is now packaged in such simplified edible forms that it has become a staple for every household.

Few foods afford such amazing variety of treatment. Milk having been awarded the palm as the most nearly perfect food, it is easy to appreciate the value of the rich minerals and sugars found in its by-product.

For complete ease of mind this holiday, a venture into cheese menus would be a blessing for the cook and a pleasant surprise for families wearied of company foods, yet whose abounding energies require the calcium, phosphorus, vitamins, and especially the proteins of which cheese contains more than any other known food.

If your Saturday dinner is to be spread on the grass as the main meal of a happy, lazy day, a menu with cheese as the central theme would be easily prepared and gratefully received.

Laborless Picnic Menu.

Rolled boned ham and spiced peaches prepared well in advance, serve cold
Hot macaroni with Swiss cheese, carried in vacuum casserole
Sardines, Danish blue cheese, herring and ripe olive canapes (prepared individually)
Stuffed eggs and baby tomatoes
Grape juice Collins
Chocolate mint patties
Fruit and Nut Cookies

For a holiday on Sunday, kitchen police will be unnecessary if a zestful cheese theme is provided for the entree rather than fowl or roast. A fondue or souffle would take little time to prepare, and even though a perfect souffle takes an hour for ideal baking, it can bake by itself and requires no watching. Clear chicken consomme or a Madrillon, two fresh simply broiled vegetables, a cold-tossed salad, punch and fruit and nut sherbet would make a pleasant home dinner.

Cheese Souffle.

Grate 1 cup American cheese. Grease a baking dish and heat oven to 350 degrees F. Make a thick, white sauce by melting 3 tablespoons butter, blending in 3 tablespoons flour and stirring in 1 cup milk slowly, cooking and stirring until sauce is thickened and smooth.

Add ½ teaspoonsalt, a dash pepper and a dash of cayenne. Add cheese and cook over a low heat, stirring constantly until cheese is melted. Remove from stove.

Separate 3 eggs, beat yolks and add a portion of the hot cheese mixture to them, stirring it in well. Return to the large mixture, mixing the yolks well into it. Cool.

Beat egg whites. Fold into cheese mixture. Turn into baking dish, set dish in a pan of hot water and bake in a slow oven, 325 degrees F., until firm, about one hour. To test for doneness, touch the souffle lightly with the finger, and if the souffle springs back readily, it is cooked. Serve immediately. Serves four. For two or three, halve recipe and use two eggs. One cup tomato puree may be used in this recipe instead of milk, if preferred.

If you must entertain or are forced into it by thoughtless relatives, you might prepare a painless buffet supper featuring cheese balls made from a number of your favorite cheeses. Crackers and cheese, when served with beautiful fresh fruit, creates one of the most distinguished and complimentary desserts that can grace the centerpiece of a well-appointed buffet. Assortments of English biscuits and salted crackers are nice contrasts to the tartness of Gorgonzola, Gruyere, Roquefort, Sliced Oka, Liederkrantz, and the sweetness of Philadelphia cream cheese.

Cheese Balls and Croquette Mixtures.

Cheese balls, fried in deep fat, croquette mixtures, using chicken, ham, salmon, crab meat or the like, seasoned highly and shaped into small balls, are tempting and not difficult to serve, if made ready for frying before the guests arrive. Serve piping hot.

LABOR DAY menu planning might be eased by serving a tomato surprise bulging with your favorite cheese. Cream or cottage cheeses are appetizing meat substitutes for between-season dining. Sweitzer, gorgonzola, pimiento, and even limburger, can be transformed into tempting entrees.

Even Men Enter Novel Contest

APPETIZERS, mild and bland; appetizers, tart and piquant; appetizers gay in humor were entered in last week's recipe contest. Even the renowned Swedish Smorgasbord had nothing on the dozens of assorted hors d'oeuvres competing for cash awards in The Post's most appetizing contest.

Variations of the before-the-entre theme vied hotly for prizes, for there were many recipes of such distinction that even the contest committee was surprised. From soups to fruits, there were such cooling creations as frozen crabmeat consomme, fresh fruit soup, jellied ruby consomme, and, one of the most delicious contributions of the entire contest, iced Spanish soup, which was frankly submitted by one of the men followers of the food page. Many thanks Mr. Josef O. DeScagnon, 1841 Lamont street northwest.

Housewives who, in the past, have lacked incentive to experiment with novel appetizers will find much food for thought in the very names suggested by imaginative hostesses. One contestant, with her tongue well in her cheek, recommended her old Virginia fruit juice and cider cocktail, which she admitted contained no alcoholics, but was stimulating none the less. Another contestant indorsed a fruit punch featuring orange juice ice blocks. Miss Weisbacker, a food page contributor, mailed in a charming appetizer cocktail in the guise of a fruit bouquet. This loyal subscriber, always resourceful in her contest efforts, made use of fresh fruits mixed in honey, and nestling in a lacy paper doily which was bordered with mint leaves, looking for all the world like a spring nosegay, but tasting so much better.

Prize Shipment.

First prize of $3 has been presented to Miss Rebecca Merriam, 5009 Fourteenth street northwest. Her recipe for a fleet of appetizers was certainly one of the most original entered and one with palate flexibility, for she has offered a versatile cargo of gherkin fillings, any one of which could be made to answer the individual tastes. The flagship of Miss Merriam's fleet—the whole pineapple—would prove a decorative centerpiece for many a late summer dinner table.

MISS MERRIAM.

A Fleet of Appetizers.

Place a fresh medium-sized pineapple on a mirror platter and stick in the hors d'oeuvre. Surround with little boats made of sour gherkins 2½ to 3 inches, split the long way. Scoop out, fill with different appetizers, and put on a little sail, rather square, of paper-thin slices of cheese, with a toothpick stuck through twice, tipped with a pearl onion.

A few suggestions as to hors d'oeuvre: Prunes, steamed, stoned, filled with cream cheese, rolled in granulated sugar; dates, stoned, filled with nuts, rolled in granulated sugar; pineapple tidbits, dipped in softened gelatin, rolled in crushed nuts; large halves of pecans pressed together with Roquefort cheese; stuffed olives, dipped in French dressing and rolled in chopped nuts.

Suggestions for cargoes of boats: Flaked crab meat, pinch of curry, cream sauce; minced cooked chicken, chopped celery, onion, salt, little cream sauce, canned Chinese vegetables, drained, chopped, soy sauce; grated carrots; flaked lobster or salmon, tabasco, sieved cooked egg yolks, pepper, salt; cooked ham and hard-boiled eggs, chopped, mayonnaise.

Michigan Mixed.

Second award of $2 was won by Mrs. H. F. Alves, 6524 First street northwest, for a recipe of unusual appeal and delicacy. Mrs. Alves graciously remarks that in her travels with her professor husband she collects many interesting recipes and then passes them on to others who experiment with different ways of serving foods. While in Ann Arbor, Mich., she picked up her rather weighty melon mixture. Many local hostesses will be eager to try Mrs. Alves' watermelon fruit cup. She remarks that it was a triumph at the melon party at which she discovered its colorful beauty.

MRS. H. ALVES.

Watermelon Appetizer.

Cut a large watermelon in half lengthwise and scoop it out. Dice the red meat and mix with balls of honeydew melon, bits of pineapple (fresh if possible), and raspberries. Sugar, rum and a lime can be added and the concoction is returned to the shells, which with the edges notched, make decorative serving bowls. Colorful cocktail glasses may be used for individual servings.

Cubes of Soup.

Mrs. Katherine Smith, Westwood Apartments, Baltimore, Md., was given a $1 prize for her appetizer contribution. Her consomme cubes and cheese straws are perfect accompaniments for any early September dinner. The combination of tomato, clam and lemon juice is a memorable one. Mrs. Smith has been awarded several prizes, among them two county fair ones, for her homemade cheese straws, for her tested method produces straw as light as a zephyr.

MRS. K. SMITH.

CONSOMME CUBES AND CHEESE STRAWS.

Combine 3 cups tomato juice and 3 cups clam juice. Season highly with the following: Salt, pepper, onion juice, celery salt, Worcestershire sauce and cayenne pepper and bring to boiling point. Add 3 tablespoons gelatine which has been soaked in cold water. Stir until dissolved. Add ¼ cup lemon juice. Mix well. Pour into shallow pan rinsed in cold water. When set, cut in cubes and pile into cups. Serve with cheese straws.

A heaping cup of grated American cheese, 1 cup flour, 2 tablespoons of butter, ½ teaspoon salt, pinch cayenne pepper. Sift salt and cayenne with flour, next blend butter with flour, and add cheese. Mix with cold water as for pie crust. Roll thin, cut into straws ⅝ inches by 5½ inches. Twist and bake on baking sheet at 400 degrees F. until crisp and light brown. This consomme may be made in advance, kept in the refrigerator, and piled in cups at the last moment. The cheese straws are not difficult to make and certainly are a splendid accompaniment for late summer dinners.

Hindu Magic.

Miss Helen Richter, 24 Rhode Island avenue northeast, was awarded a $1 prize for her Calcutta hors d'oeuvre and its very name bespeaks the haunting flavor of these tid bits. Mrs. Richter recommends them as "a zestful appetizer served with chilled tomato juice. The tang and savor of the ingredients, however, make this canape satisfying enough to be used as a light meal for those who like their Far East tangs biting and zestful.

MISS RICHTER.

Calcuttas.

Select large prunes: steam tender; remove seeds; stuff with mixture of 1 tablespoon minced gherkins, 1 tablespoon cooked rice, 1 tablespoon chopped chutney, ⅛ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon paprika. Dip into Worchestershire sauce; wrap each with strip of bacon fastened with toothpick. Broil until bacon is crisp. Serve hot. Makes six to eight Calcuttas. This makes a zestful appetizer, served with chilled tomato juice.

Snowy Peaks.

Mrs. C. H. Leps, 1869 California street northwest, has also been awarded a $1 prize for an appetizer salad. The mounds of crystal-clear nutriment were too much for the contest committee, for the word picture alone, Snow on the Mountain, was enough to cool off a humid atmosphere. The artist named her appetizer well, for the shredded coconut and pears against the sparkle of transparent lime jelly produces a portrait almost too beautiful to eat.

MRS. C.H. LEPS.

SNOW ON THE MOUNTAIN SALAD.

This salad is an appetizer preceding the vegetable course.

Use any preferred lime-flavored and ready-sweetened gelaine. Mold in cups. Immediately before serving, turn the little green mounds onto nests of chilled lettuce or cress on individual colored salad plates, preferably green plates. Cut off enough of the tops of the mounds to allow almost all of half of a canned pear to be fitted on top of the jelly mound, giving the appearance of a snow-capped mountain. Over the whole salad sprinkle a small amount of dry coconut. Place the amount of mayonnaise desired at the base of the jelly mound. This serves six.

CONTEST RUNNERS-UP

Josef O. DeScagnon, 1841 Lamont street northwest—Iced soup, Spanish style.

September Is Stealing June Wedding Laurels

Dozen Big Ceremonies Scheduled for Coming Week-End; Miss Helen Muriel James Becomes Bride of Carlton Wahl.

June, which long has held the spotlight as the month for weddings, this year has a rival in September, with a dozen large ceremonies scheduled for this week-end alone.

One of the most elaborate weddings of the early fall season took place last evening at 8:30, when Miss Helen Muriel James, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Earl James, became the bride of Carlton Wilson Wahl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Wahl, of Woodside Park, Md. The First Methodist Episcopal Church, of Chevy Chase, Md., was the scene of the marriage, at which the Rev. Edward G. Latch officiated.

The altar was banked with palms and bridal flowers. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of traditional ivory satin made on Empire lines. From a tightly fitted bodice flared the skirt of the gown which fell in cascades of satin to the floor and swept back into a long train. At the throat of the high neckline and at the waist were two tiny bows and the long sleeves formed points over the hand. Her veil, which completely covered the train, was held by a band of orange blossoms to her hair. The bridal bouquet was of white orchids and lillies of the valley.

Sister Serves As Honor Matron

Mrs. Eugenie James Osgood, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and was gowned in Pompeian red satin designed like the bride's gown. With this she wore a coronet of braided satin from which fell a maline shoulder veil of the same shade as the gown.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. George Morris Barnes, Miss Eleanor Quirk, Miss Claudine Bageant, Miss Betty Law, Miss Betty Law, Miss Barbara Wahl, and Miss Dorothy Hobbs.

Mrs. Barnes and Miss Quirk were gowned in Aureole satin, with matching coronets and veils, Miss Bageant and Miss Law's gowns were of Venetian gold satin, and the gowns of Miss Wahl and Miss Hobbs were of Italian red. All of the gowns were similar to the bride's, except that they had no train and had short-puffed sleeves.

John Murphy, of Appleton, Wis., was best man, and the ushers were William Crampton, William Oitcheson, Oden Bowie, Walter Mulligan, Monroe Emmerich and Peter Snyder.

Large Reception Follows Ceremony

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents at 6800 Meadow Lane, Chevy Chase.

Mrs. James, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black crepe with a shirred bodice embroidered with carnations. At the shoulder was pinned a white orchid. Mrs. James is widely known as a writer and poet, and has published one volume of poetry and is now in the process of completing another. Her poems have been printed in numerous magazines and have won several prizes.

The bridegroom's mother was attired in royal purple chiffon velvet, and wore a lavender orchid. Assisting at the reception were Miss Janet Weidemann, Mrs. Stewart Beall, Mrs. Charles Poole and Mrs. Raymond Hust.

Upon their return they will make their home at 8403 Sixteenth street.

The bride attended the University of Wisconsin during her freshman year, and later went to the University of Maryland. During her senior year she was president of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority, president of the Panhellenic Council and president of the International Relations Club.

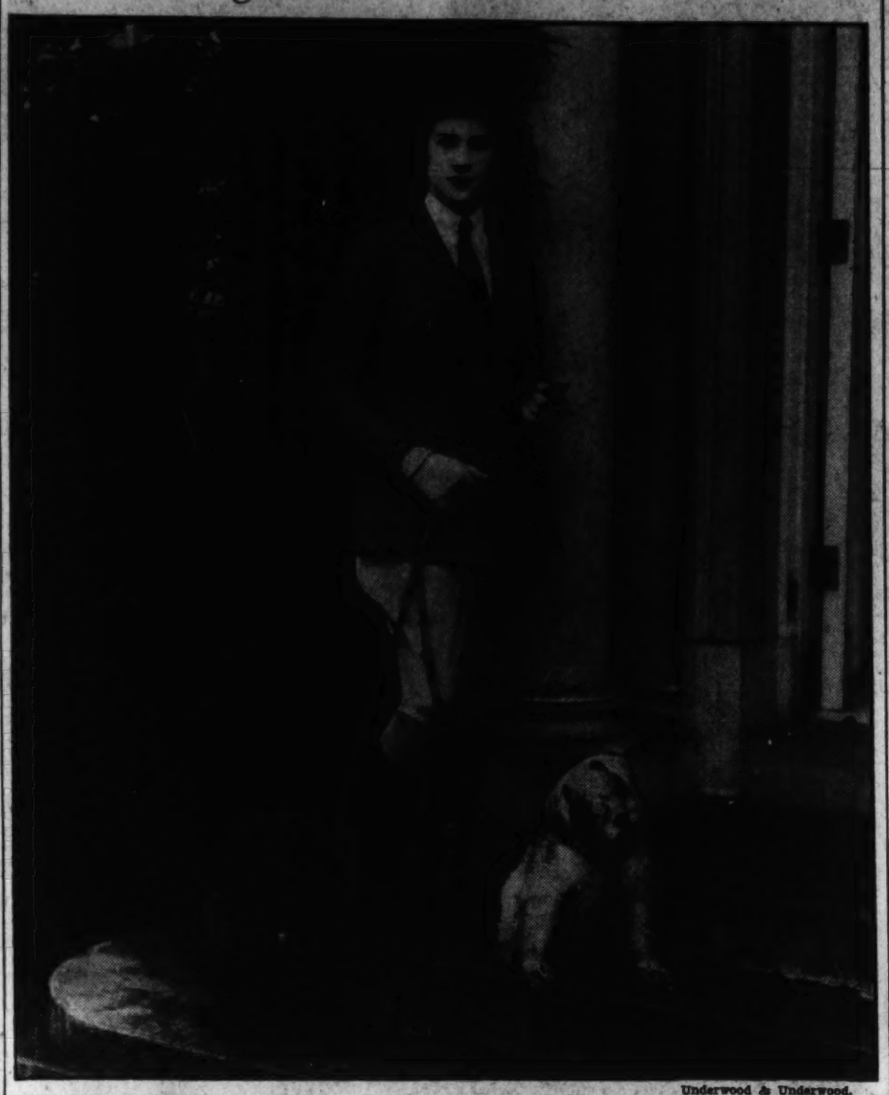
The bridegroom attended the University of Maryland and was vice president of Sigma Nu fraternity.

Hotel's Royal Suite Being Prepared for Maharajah's Visit

The royal suite of the Carlton Hotel is being made ready for the arrival Sunday of his highness, the Maharajah of Bhavnagar and her highness, the Maharani. The royal couple and their party now are in Chicago after an extended tour of the country, and plan to be in Washington for several days.

This is the first visit of the Maharajah and the Maharani to the United States. They are accompanied by a large ritinue.

Wedding Will Take Place This Month



Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Mary Winifred Brown, whose marriage to Eugene N. Foss 2d will take place on September 17. The ceremony will be performed at Sugar Hill, N. H., where the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Thomas Clark Brown, of Washington, has a summer home. Mr. Foss is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin S. Foss, of Chestnut Hills, Mass.

Palmers Motor To Post in Texas

Army Lieutenant and Bride Were Married in Maine.

Lieut. and Mrs. Shelby Young Palmer, jr., now are on their way by motor to Randolph Field, Tex., where Lieut. Palmer is stationed. The couple was married Wednesday in Weld, Me.

Mrs. Palmer is the former Miss Jean Hamilton Smith, daughter of Col. Rodney Hamilton Smith, U. S. Army, and Mrs. Smith. Lieut. Palmer is the son of Shelby Young Palmer, of Washington.

The ceremony was performed in the village church at Weld which the bride's great-great-grandparents attended. The Rev. George D. Moore, of Farmington, Me., officiated. A reception was held later at Keewanhee Inn.

Col. Smith gave his daughter in marriage and she was attended by Miss Gloria F. Drumm as maid of honor. Lieut. Tracy B. Harrington, a classmate of the bridegroom at West Point was best man. Arrangements for the wedding were as simple as possible, owing to the recent death of the brides grandmother, Mrs. Smith, widow of Gen. George Rodney Smith.

Mrs. Palmer has, until recently, been visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Rogers, widow of Gen. Harry L. Rogers, who is hostess to the corps of cadets at the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Mrs. Palmer's parents, Col. and Mrs. Smith, returned to this country in June from Brazil, where Col. Smith has been chief of the military mission at Rio de Janiero. He is on leave and will assume his new duties at Boston with the Coast Artillery Corps shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Sweetland, of Piedmont, Calif., are at the Shoreham. They recently returned from three months in Europe, where they visited Italy, Switzerland, France and the British Isles.

Mr. and Mrs. Sweetland are accompanied by their children, Helen, Virginia, Theodore, Eugene and William.

Miss Harriet L. Hunt Is Engaged to Marry

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Beeson Hunt, of Washington, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Harriet Louise HHunt, to Dos Taylor Hatfield, son of Judge Charles S. Hatfield, of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, and Mrs. Hatfield.

Miss Hunt attended De Pauw University and Kings College, University of London. Mr. Hatfield is a graduate of National University Law School and is a member of the District Bar Association.

The wedding will take place October 21.

Mr. Hunt, father of the bride-to-be, was formerly head of the Scripps-MacRaye Syndicate.

Lyerlys Take Wedding Trip

Couple Was Married at Bethesda; Will Live in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Keith Lyerly, who were married last Sunday in the rectory of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Bethesda, Md., are spending their honeymoon in Atlantic City, Philadelphia and New York. On their return they will reside at 1350 Newton street for a short period and tthen go to Long Beach, Calif., to make their home.

Mrs. Lyerly is the former Miss Rose S. D'Alfonso, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. D'Alfonso, of Washington. Mr. Lyerly is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph K. Lyerly, of Salisbury, N. C.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph A. Little. The bride wore white lace over satin with a tulle veil attached to a halo of orange blossoms. She carried gardenias, white roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Francis De S. Kavanagh served as matron of honor for her sister and Mr. Kavanagh was best man.

Leland Willises Will Live Here

Couple Will Return From Their Honeymoon on September 15.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Leland Willis, who were married Saturday, will be at home after September 15 at 1838 Third street.

The bride, the former Miss Leone Anderson, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thomas Anderson, of Lake City, S. C. Mr. Willis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore P. C. Willis, of Washington.

Their marriage took place at the Church of Christ of the Latter Day Saints, Samuel R. Carpenter officiating.

The bride wore a satin gown with a long train and a tulle veil attached to a pearl coronet. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her attendants were her sister, Miss Margaret Anderson, and Mrs. Paul Clarke, who were attired in blue chiffon trimmed with pink and carried pink roses. Paul Clarke was best man and the ushers were Edward Spies, Frank Rollins and Alvin Willis, brother of the bridegroom.

Oscar Crosby Has Niece as Guest at Warrenton Home

Oscar Crosby has as his guest at his home, Viewtrees, in Warrenton, his niece, Mi Wilfrid Zell, of Brookhaven, Minn.

ERNEST LINDLEY
NOW WRITES A COLUMN ON NATIONAL AFFAIRS FOR
The Washington Post
WASHINGTON'S HOME NEWSPAPER

In these days, when public opinion is confused, and when new governmental policies are being launched with bewildering rapidity, it is important, both for the press and the public, that there be published regularly a column prepared by a man who is generally recognized as a well-informed and sympathetic interpreter of the Administration's program and point of view.

In Ernest Lindley The Post brings its readers another point of view, from the man who is recognized as a well-informed and sympathetic interpreter of the Administration's program and policies. Mr. Lindley is the author of a biography of the President and of three other books on various aspects of the New Deal, all of which have been widely praised. Said Secretary Harold Ickes about Lindley: ". . . while I frequently disagree with his opinions, he is well qualified to interpret intelligently the current political and economic scene, and I will enjoy reading his 'slant' on national developments."

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Mrs. Jerry Is Uneasy.

"Don't backward look, but look ahead;
The future's yours; the past is dead.
—Old Mother Nature.

Jerry Muskrat and Mrs. Jerry had lived a long time in or near the Smiling Pool. Most of the time they had had a house where the water was shallow at the upper end of the Smiling Pool where the cattails grew. In the spring when the water had risen and driven them out of their house they had moved over to a fine burrow in the bank of the Laughing Brook.

They had raised many children there. Some were living in the neighborhood. Others had gone down the Laughing Brook to the Big River and so out into the Great World to make homes for themselves.

Jerry liked the Smiling Pool. He had lived there practically all his life. Even when he and Mrs. Jerry had been swept away in a great flood they had finally made their way back. "It is the best place in all the Great World," he had declared many times and had believed it. But a happy home always is the best place in all the Great World. Everyone knows this.

Jerry had spent a pleasant, rather lazy, summer. Mrs. Jerry had spent a busy one. Good mothers usually are busy, especially while the children are small. Now fall was close at hand and Mrs. Jerry had more time to herself. You see the last of the second family of children were well grown and able to look out for themselves, or felt that they were.

For several days Mrs. Jerry had spent considerable time among the rushes and cattails wandering about. She didn't appear to be eating more than usual in so far as Jerry could see.

"What makes you so uneasy, my dear?" Jerry asked.

"Am I uneasy?" replied Mrs. Jerry.

"You seem so to me," said Jerry in his high squeaky voice. "What do you wander about so much for?"

"Oh, I'm just looking around," replied Mrs. Jerry, and this was all he could get from her for several days.

She visited the children who were living near. Late one afternoon when it was about time for the coming of the Black Shadow from the Purple Hills she disappeared down the Laughing Brook and she didn't come back that night. No, sir, she didn't return that night. It was very late the following night before Jerry saw her again.

"What makes you so uneasy, my dear?" Jerry asked.

"Where have you been?" he wanted to know.

"Looking around," she replied.

"Looking around for what? It seems to me that you grow more uneasy these days," said Jerry.

"I am," replied Mrs. Jerry. "I've been uneasy in my mind for some time."

Jerry stared at her a bit blankly. "Uneasy in your mind?" said he, as if he didn't understand, as indeed he didn't. "What under the sun is the matter with you? Are you sick or something? Why should you be uneasy in your mind? What is wrong? With the children no longer to be cared for you should take it easy now until we have to put things in shape for the winter. What are you worrying about?"

"The winter and where we are going to live," replied Mrs. Jerry.

"Wh-wh-what's that?" cried Jerry as if he doubted his own ears.

Mrs. Jerry repeated. Jerry still looked blank, as if he didn't understand at all what she was talking about. "Why we'll live right where we are here in the Smiling Pool just as we always have," said he.

"I wonder," replied Mrs. Jerry.

"What do you wonder? Do talk sense," retorted Jerry crossly.

"I wonder if we can live here through another winter," said Mrs. Jerry. "I doubt it. It is this that has made me so uneasy."

Jerry did stare at her then. "You're crazy," said he.

Flameless Cooking HAS PUBLIC PA ACCEPTANCE

"P.A." stands for Public Acceptance—the stamp of approval by the buying public for any product that gives complete satisfaction. Electric or Flameless Cooking has P.A.! In and about Washington there are 15,000 housewives using Flameless Cooking, who can tell you of their happy experiences. During 1937, in this territory, over 4,300 homes were made modern with Flameless Cooking installations.

There are basic, sound reasons for this "P.A." of Flameless Cooking. Ask any electric range user about it—be thriftily inquisitive about all its advantages. Get all the facts. Then you, too, will decide to "go electric"! Public acceptance is the actual test of merit—the unprinted certificate that makes Flameless Cooking the accepted method for Modern homes—and we do mean Modern!

Because it's Safe

Obviously, this is so.

A house is a better place in which to live, eat, work, play and sleep, when equipped for Flameless Cooking.

Because it's Economical

In electric cooking, pots and pans rest directly on the flameless unit and cover the entire heating surface. No openings are necessary for escape of fumes. Heat is absorbed through the vessel as if it were an integral part of the electric unit. Little heat is wasted. No blackened pots or pans to scour, saving time and temper.

Electric automatic controls give economical results. The necessary amount of heat can be used for every purpose. "Matchless Service" low rates complete the ideal combination for economy in Flameless Cooking.

Because it's Cool

There are no products of combustion leaving any of the heating units of the electric range, and carrying heat with them.

Absence of flame means that no heat is wasted in fumes. The flameless electric heating unit is enclosed within the oven with all SIX sides practically sealed. The kitchen is cool.

Because it's Healthful

Electric cooking consumes no oxygen, because there is no flame. Fumes from combustion are eliminated and waste heat is so small in quantity that it does not overheat the kitchen. Work is carried on more easily and in a freer atmosphere.

A Flameless range does not affect the air in a kitchen.

Because it's Clean

There is no flame, smoke, dirt, grime, soot or residue in Flameless Cooking. "Matchless Service" leaves all those things at its power houses. Flameless Cooking makes possible a clean kitchen!

. . . . . and it's fast!

Old electric ranges were slow. The Modern Electric Range is fast. Prove it for yourself.

15,000 families in and near Washington have adopted Clean, Healthful FLAMELESS COOKING

PWA Gives $24,750 for Part Cost of Incinerator at Bladensburg.

The PWA yesterday announced a $24,750 grant had been approved for construction of an incinerator to be operated by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission at Bladensburg, Md.

The grant represents 45 per cent of the estimated cost of the project, $55,000. The sanitary commission will obtain funds to match the Federal grant through a bond issue, J. Darby Bowman, secretary, announced.

Bowman said the 1937 Maryland Legislature authorized the commission to float a bond issue, not to exceed $50,000, for construction of an incinerator. The legislative act also gave the sanitary commission the right to levy a "reasonable service charge" for use of the incinerator to raise funds for the interest and prinicpal on the bond issue.

Gumps Assailed.

The incinerator will be for the use of individuals and towns in the metropolitan area of Prince Georges County. All trash and other refuse will have to be disposed of in the incinerator except in cases where a town or individual operates a private refuse dump approved by the county health officer.

The incinerator will be constructed of reinforced concrete and brick and will have a capacity of 70 tons.

Frequent controversies have arisen in recent years over the problem of burning and smoking trash dumps in the county.

The sanitary commission, several years ago, operated a dump on River road near the site of the proposed incinerator, but decided to close it after complaints from residents of Cheverly, Md. The dump was held to be a public nuisance because of its fumes.

More than 800 youngsters took part yesterday in a field day program held at Magruder Park, Hyattsville, Md., under auspices of the Prince Georges county division of the State-wide WPA recreational project.

Shirley Harvey, 5, won first prize for having the oldest doll in the show. A family heirloom, Shirley's doll was 50 years old.

Besides Magruder Park, playgrounds represented were Beltsville, Riverdale, Brentwood, Colmar Manor, Capitol Heights and District Heights. Claude C. Bowers, of Riverdale, chairman of the county division of the recreational project, was in charge of the program.

Tydings Gets Montgomery Units' Backing

The tax-reduction Democrats of Montgomery County yesterday joined with the two other rival Democratic groups, the independent and organization, in indorsing Senator Tydings for re-election.

Sumner Wood, candidate for nomination to State Senate and spokesman for the tax-reduction Democrats, also announced the names of eight candidates for county offices who had been indorsed by the tax-reduction group.

They include five organization Democrats, two independents and William F. Prettyman, who is an unaffiliated candidate for judge of the Circuit Court. Prettyman also has the indorsement of the independent Democrats.

The organization candidates who were indorsed include John Oxley, for county commissioner; Benjamin G. Wilkinson, jr., for State's attorney; Stanton C. Peelle, jr., for House of Delegates; Clayton K. Watkins, for clerk of the Circuit Court, and Charles W. Maddox, for surveyor.

The independent Democratic candidates indorsed were Clarence E. Becraft, for treasurer, and John H. Gassaway, for delegate to the State convention.

Gettysburg, Pa., Sept. 1.—Over 200 first-year students will report at Gettysburg College on September 12 for the twelfth annual freshman week activities in preparation for the opening of the college for its 107th year on September 15. A student body of about 650 is expected.

Pugh Will Ask Audit of Books Of Sanitary Unit

Montgomery's Prosecutor Seeks Data on Bonds of Commission.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh, of Montgomery County, declared yesterday he would ask for an audit of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission's books.

Pugh, a candidate for State senator in the Democratic primary on the independent Democratic faction's ticket, denied his demand for an audit might be a political move. He said he would ask the county commissioners for permission to conduct the audit.

He added that if any evidence of wrongdoing was uncovered he would ask for a grand jury investigation in September or November.

Pugh said he wanted to find out why the Sanitary Commission is paying 3½ per cent on its bonds when Montgomery County gets a better interest rate.

"And I want to know who buys these bonds," he added. "Our property backs up these bonds and it seems to me we should know all about them like we know all about the bonds issued by the county officials at Rockville.

"The Sanitary Commission has a sinking fund to pay off its bonds. We think we are entitled to know who holds this sinking fund. Do they hold it themselves, or is it held by a third party, as is the case when commissions of this kind are properly regulated and supervised?"

Riley Smith May Be Lost to Redskins 3 Weeks

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

En Route to Dallas, Sept. 1.—Quiet, please, while we try to figure out what the College All-Stars' 28-16 victory over the Redskins proved.

Did it prove that college football, at its best is superior to professional football? In the words of the popular song, 'No—No, No—No." Did it prove that Cecil Isbell is ready to take rank with Sammy Baugh as the same dread forward passing threat? My good fellow, don't be absurd!

POVICH.

What it did prove, unmistakably, is that the Redskins miss Cliff Battles no less than Hitler would miss his Storm Troopers if they, too, joined the Columbia University coaching staff.

Coach Ray Flaherty's words uttered last winter, when Battles quit the Redskins to take a coaching job, figuratively reverberated over the scene at Soldiers Field last night when the All-Stars forward passed to two touchdowns, intercepted passes for two more. Last winter, when the league's greatest ground gainer quit the Redskins, Flaherty had said, 'We'll miss him all right—on defense!"

Flaherty wasn't detracting from Battles' ability to run the ball. He was thinking merely as a coach would think—a coach who shudders every time the opposition winds up to throw a pass. For Battles was the key man in the Redskins' pass defense. With Battles out there last night, bringing into play his native smartness, his six feet, two inches and his speed, the Redskins would not have stood idly about and watched the All-Stars' touchdowns go by.

Pressure Was Off Isbell.

Because, for one thing, those were sucker passes on which the All-Stars scored two of their touchdowns. They were the long, high floating passes that you see grammar school kids pull. They would have been soft touches for a fellow like Battles who would have grabbed 'em and been off like a streak.

The All-Stars got away with 'em because in the Redskins' backfield there was no Battles, and because they were thrown in that second half when the Redskins were a leg-weary, tuckered outfit still being pounded by fresh men poured into the All-Stars' line-up. Back there pitching, Isbell was never rushed. The weary professionals were willing but weak. Isbell had oodles of time and he simply waited until the fast ends outfooted the tired Redskin backs and then he let fly.

It didn't prove exactly that Isbell was a great passer, or even a good one. He'll be joining the Green Bay Packers this week, but we doubt if Coach Curly Lambeau is counting too heavily on his passing ability. In the pro league, they can't get away with the kind of passes that Isbell was throwing. Unless he can whip those short, bullet passes a la Baugh he won't be much help to the Packers. We don't know yet that he can.

The result hardly proved that the best college team is better than the pro champions, because it wasn't a football game. It was, in a sense, a relay race and the Redskins were outnumbered. Forty-eight different men the All-Star coaches pumped at the 28 Redskins, but that isn't all. Some of the All-Stars, like Frank Patrick, found their way into the ball game four times, and always freshened up.

Collegians' Line Outclassed.

But with all their replacements, the All-Stars were sadly outclassed at the running game. Isbell, the great Corby Davis, Whizzer White, Don Heap and the other big-shot college backs of 1937 were given an awful going over by that Redskin line, weary as it was. They accumulated a total of only 23 yards by their running game.

It was significant, too that when the Redskins were fresh and on even terms in that first quarter, the All-Stars couldn't punch the ball across the goal from the 10-inch line in three tries. The Redskin linemen handled the All-Star line on that occasion as if they were tin soldiers. Of course the question might be asked inquiring how the All-Stars reached the 10-inch line. It was with one of those long, looping, sucker passes.

The Redskins' coach walked across the field to congratulate Bo McMillan and his staff after the collegians' victory, but they refused to hail it as a surpassing triumph for the college coaches. They didn't consider that the college coaching staff had accomplished much and they were irked no end, at a mellower point in the evening, when at an after-the-game party the college coaches were being roundly feted.

'Look'it those guys strutting around here as if they'd done something," cracked Roy Baker. "Those lucky stiffs weren't coaching a football team, they were coaching an army!"

There isn't much doubt that the Redskins and other professional teams who participate in the All-Star games think that the pros get all the worst of the arrangements, playing under college rules and with college officials. But they remain discreetly silent on those points, in view of the $23,000 guarantee that goes to the pro team.

If the truth be known, the pros are merely stooges in this All-Star game. It is the assembly of the college stars which makes the game. The sponsors capture the fans' interest by drafting stars from every corner of the Nation and they know that it is the Collegians, not the pros, who pull the fans through the gate. The All-Stars are the featured performers and the sponsors aim to keep the game as collegiate as possible, de-emphasizing the pros as much as they can without insulting 'em.

Thus it was that when the lights went out at Soldiers' Field before the game and the pageantry began, the Collegians' starting line-up trooped out on the field one by one and were introduced individually under a spotlight. The Redskins were merely introduced as a group. Head Coach Flaherty raged at the procedure.

"It isn't fair," he said with some heat. "It gives the collegians a great psychological edge. It whips 'em up. I know there must be plenty of hickering on that college squad and that it might not be keyed up. But when they flash those lights and play the Alma Mater songs for each of those kids, they go into that game in a competitive fury. That sort of a reception would help the Redskins, too. I asked the officials to introduce my boys individually. But oh, no, that couldn't be done. We're only stooges in this game."

Bucs Blank Giants, 6-0; Klinger Star

New York Topples to Fourth; Reds, Cubs Tied in Second.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 1.—The pennant march of the Pirates rolled over the New York Giants, 6 to 0, today and advanced to seven full games in front of the National League parade.

Blanked with seven hits by rookie Bob Klinger, the Giants dropped below second place for the first time this year, winding up fourth, half a game behind the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago Cubs, who climbed into a tie for the runner-up berth.

A ladies' day crowd of 28,839 saw Klinger come off the hospital list and demonstrate that his sore arm is once more ready for active duty. The 29-year-old freshman from the Coast League was on top of the situation throughout as he went the route for the first time since August 5 and chalked up his ninth win against five defeats for the year.

Cubs Win, 4-2; Tie For Second Place.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—Chicago's Cubs gained a tie for second place in the National League with Cincinnati today by capitalizing on Johnny Lanning's wildness and beating the Boston Bees, 4 to 2.

Carl Reynolds' double and Bill Jurges' single combined with three walks by Lanning gave the Cubs three runs in the second inning. After yielding a run in the third, Milt Shoffner, who relieved Lanning, blanked the Cubs the rest of the way.

Local Sandlot Nine Barred From Championship Playoffs

The Heurich Brewers were disqualified from the city championship series yesterday by the National Amateur Baseball Federation, on submitted evidence that they are members of a semipro league in Baltimore.

The Brewers were competing in the series to determine the city sandlot champion, with the winner going to Pittsburgh for the federation's annual tournament next week.

James F. Enright, field director of the N. A. B. F. from Baltimore, filed the complaint with Commissioner Walter H. Maloney, president of the local federation, who turned the matter over to the national body in Cleveland. They immediately suspended the local team.

O'Donnell's Grill nine, runners-up in the Industrial League, will finish the series and play the FBI nine Saturday at 3:30 on the East Ellipse. The winner of this game will meet the Pepco team in the final game Tuesday to determine the championship.

The Heurich team finished fifth in a six-team semipro league in Baltimore. The bylaws of the federation state that any team playing semipro ball is not eligible to compete in any elimination tourney leading up to the national amateur event.

'Out on His Back!"

Norman Schlueter, White Sox catcher, made a heroic effort to slide into second in sixth inning of game with Washington here yesterday. But he was out on the play. Cecil Travis, covering the bag, took the throw from Jim Weaver, who had fielded Bill Lee's bunt.

Quarterback Suffers Bad Leg Injury

Right Leg Swollen From Knee to His Thigh; Team to Dallas.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, En Route to Dallas With the Redskins, Sept. 1.—But we are not en route to Dallas with all the Redskins. In a Chicago hospital, pain-wracked, lies Quarterback Riley Smith, who was a gallant, uncomplaining figure in the bruising battle with the College All Stars.

When the Redskins entrained this morning for the game with the Texas All Stars at Dallas Monday, Smith was left behind. All others of the battered Washington squad were able to hobble to the train, but not Smith. His right leg, from his knee to his thigh, is swollen to nearly twice its normal size. A muscles injury, as yet undetermined, may keep him idle for three weeks, cause him to miss the Redskins' debut on September 11.

The rugged, handsome Smith was, perhaps, the greatest of the Redskins heroes against the All Stars. As the team's only remaining signal caller after Sammy Baugh was injured, he was forced to play 58 minutes of the game, blocking, punting and receiving passes in addition to his quarterback duties.

Out for Three Weeks.

Not until Coach Ray Flaherty spotted him limping and withdrew him from the line-up with two minutes to play, did Smith complain. At the Redskins' hotel it was revealed that both of his legs were badly battered and that the right was puffed balloon-like. He was in pain and could barely walk.

At the Chicago hospital, doctors declared that Smith would not be able to return to action for three weeks. But Trainer Roy Baker, pointing out that Smith possessed abnormally long leg muscles which would heal rapidly, foresaw the possibility that the quarterback might be in the opening line-up against Brooklyn on September 11.

Smtih's injury is the latest in an already stricken Redskin back field. Blocker Ernie Pinckert is the only member of the 1937 backfield who is now in good health. Sammy Baugh's injured foot received a terrific setback in the All Star game and Ed Justice's wrenched shoulders was further aggravated. Don Irwin's twisted knee did not permit him to play last night.

Depend on Rookies.

There is little doubt that the Redskins' backfield duties against the Texas All Stars in the Dallas game will devolve almost fully on Pinckert, Max Krause and the rookie talent—George Karamatic, Dick Tuckey, Andy Farkas, George Abbitt and Roy Campbell.

Baugh, hurt on the first play of last night's game, has been ordered to stay off his foot almost completely. If he appears in the game against the Texans, it will be merely to start the game, throw a few passes and duck out. That procedure will probably be repeated at the start of the second half.

The Redskins added Andy Farkas to their retinue today but he is not in rip-roaring good health either. A sinus attack, followed by a three-day siege in the hospital, removed Farkas as a figure in the All Stars line-up.

The bespectacled Detroit back who is regarded as a potential successor to Battles, is eager to get into a Redskin uniform. He will add speed, if nothing else, to the team.

Seven of the College All-Stars who opposed the Redskins at Chicago will be in the line-up of the Texas All-Stars Monday. They are Frank Kovatch, the Northwestern end who raised such havoc last night; Benton, pass-catching end from Arkansas; Wolfe, Texas U. halfback; Routt, Texas A. & M. center; Smith, Oklahoma end; Frank Patrick, Pitt fullback, and Robbins, Arkansas passing ace.

Three Redskins must be cut adrift to permit Flaherty to reach the 30-player limit before the opening game and it is a fine scramble among the rookie talent. One back, one lineman and one end are certain to lose out. With reason to be jittery are the two Washington boys, Jay Turner and Clem Stralka.

Enjoying new stature with the Redskins as a consequence of their play on Wednesday night are three of the team's backs—Max Krause, George Karamatic and Dick Tuckey.

Krause and Karamatic indicated that they are powerful rivals for the fullback position vacated by Cliff Battles and Tuckey has virtually qualified as the number one understudy to Sammy Baugh.

Bosox Down Browns, 5-3

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 1.—With Jimmy Foxx's thirty-ninth homer signalizing a return to hitting form, the Boston Red Sox took the odd game of the three-game series from the St. Louis Browns today, 5 to 3.

FOXX.

Lefty Fritz Ostermueller pitched fine ball, allowing the Browns only seven hits.

He led 5-1 going into the ninth, having allowed only five hits up to then, one being Ralph Kress' homer in the second. With one out in the ninth, Foxx hit his 39th.

Chisox Beat Nats, 11-6; Shell Three Pitchers

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Chicago's unpredictable White Sox extended their pregame batting practice over into legal innings yesterday, blasted the pitching of three Washington hurlers for 18 hits and sent the Nats reeling to defeat, 11-6, making a clean sweep of the three-game sereis at Griffith Stadium.

Primary cause of the Senators' downfall was Chicago's pitching, a nine-hit brand supplied by methodical Thornton Lee, who also played a prominent role in his team's offensive. With exception of the eighth inning when the Nats jarred four runs loose from Lee with the aid of three lusty base-hits, the slick-haired hurler was very effective.

Washington fans found some solace in the line-drive four-bagger Al Simmons swatted into the bleachers in the big eighth, tying the home run record of 19 for Washington batters, established by "Goose" Goslin back in 1928. It was Simmons' lone hit of the fray, and scored Zeke Bonura ahead of him.

Fatten Batting Averages.

Chicago got off to a 1-0 lead in the first inning, and after the score was tied up at 2-all in the third, proceeded to put the game on ice with a four-run rally in the fourth. Harry Kelley, on the mound at the time, later retired in favor of Monte Weaver, who finished out the eighth before turning the assignment over to Jimmy DeShong.

The Sox, meanwhile, were fattening their batting averages on three hits and two runs in the sixth; and four hits and three runs in the seventh. The game was lost and far beyond recall when DeShong went out to put a period to the proceedings.

Chicago's first run was the direct result of Owen's double and Walker's single, and the Nats couldn't match it until the second—and then it required the services of six men. Bonura led off with a hot smash to Dykes who muffed it. But Zeke was held to the bag as Simmons flied out, then was forced at second by Wright. West prodded Wright to third with a single, and the fat fielder scored when Rick Ferrell punched his first hit of the afternoon to left.

Chicago went ahead a second time in the third when Lee rapped a single through the box, and legged it home with an astonishing burst of speed on Kuhel's double to deep centerfield. Then came the storm.

The Sox batted around in the fourth with Appling, Steinbacher, "Papa" Dykes, Owen and Walker contributing singles to the cause. Kuhel drew a walk midway through the inning—intended to bring the supposedly easy Owen to bat with a double-play in mind. But his high bounder over the box went for a single and upset the Nats' well-laid plans.

In the sixth it was Owen again who brough grief to the home club with a slashing single to center, scoring Lee, who got on through a fielder's choice, and Kuhel, who doubled off the rightfield wall.

And in the eighth doubles by Schlueter and Lee, Radcliff's single and Zeke Bonura's error on Kuhel's blast down the line featured the closing there-run rally.

Buddy Lewis opened the Nats' half of the eighth by bouncing a double off the rightfield wall. Travis grounded out to Appling, but Bonura scored Lewis with a single and went to second on a passed ball before Simmons poled his home run.

Wright breathed fresh life into the rally with a double to center, scoring on Ferrell's double after West flied out to right. George Case came in to bat for Weaver and ended the inning with a pop fly to centerfield.

Feller Beats Macks, 11-4

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 1.—Bob Feller chalked up his thirteenth victory of the season today by defeating the Athletics, 11 to 4, in the final of a three-game series which Cleveland swept from the Hackmen. Frankie Hayes contributed a home run in the sixth with two on base for the Athletics. It was his tenth homer of the season.

FELLER.

The Indians hammered four Philadelphia pitchers for 12 hits. Lee Buck Ross, who started, was charged with the defeat.

Bibber McCoy Bows to Dusek In Stadium Wrestling Feature

Ernie Dusek defeated Bibber McCoy in the feature of the weekly wrestling show at Griffith Stadium last night, using a good swift kick then a leap to end the match in 51 minutes, before 1,000 fans.

It was a rough and tumble encounter and easily the best on the card. Dusek worked on McCoy's leg and the latter repaid him by concentrating on the winner's arm. McCoy was out of the ring three times while Ernie managed to stay between the ropes for the distance.

McCoy's last exit from the ring was fatal, for as he was rolling back into the ring, Dusek booted him and then fell full force and pinned him for the triumph.

Red Ryan, last week's battle royal winner, won the feature of the preliminary bouts, throwing Bill Middlekauf in 15½ minutes with a flying scissors. The loser was out of the ropes, protesting to Referee Burns Ryan's boxing tactics, when the latter pulled him into the ring and pinned him with the scissors.

Ed Meske avoided the usual opening match draw by pinning Louis Bacigalupi in 14½ minutes with a kangaroo kick.

Kank Barber required 16½ minutes to toss Jack League with a headlock and back body drop, while Hans Steinke used the second imported hold of the evening, the Australian boomerang, as he tossed Mike Mazurki after 19 minutes.

3 Face Trouble In 'Ringer' Case.

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Illinois Racing Commission today approved the recommendation of the Washington Park board of stewards that Owner and Trainer E. J. Lubbering, of San Antonio, Tex., and Jockey George Napier of West Galesburg, Ill., be ruled off the turf for their connection with what the stewards described as the entrance of a horse in a race August 2 under another name.

The horse, routinely identified as Laddie Boy Ring, was entered as a first-time starter and the odds were bet down from 50 to 1 to nearly 3 to 1. The horse was nipped at the wire by an outsider in the betting.

Welsh and Lynch Meet for Middle Atlantic Tennis Title

C. Channing And Latona Are Beaten

By Jack Munhall.

Winning even more easily than expected, top-seeded Barney Welsh, the District champion, and second-ranking Hugh Lynch yesterday marched into the finals of the Post-Middle Atlantic tennis championships at Edgemoor and will meet tomorrow for the title.

Seeking his first crown in this tournament, Welsh whipped Charley Channing, whose surprising play of late enabled him to produce two upsets in as many days, 6—3, 6—3. Hugh Lynch, likewise bidding for his first Middle Atlantic title, played some of his finest tennis of the season to hand Tony Latona the worst licking of their long rivalry, 6—4, 6—0.

Welsh, for six consecutive years an outstanding figure in local tennis, extended himself only when necessary in beating the young University of Virginia student who had gained the semifinal round by upsetting fourth-seeded Ray Stocklimski.

Channing Sets Pace.

With his famed service and booming forehand functioning perfectly, Welsh allowed Channing to set the pace most of the way and asserted himself only when Charley got out of hand.

In the first two games of the opening set, Welsh gave the gallery a sample of the skill which has kept him at the top of District tennis for six years when he aced his rugged foe twice and allowed him but two points.

After that Welsh allowed Channing to do whatever forcing there was and contented himself with returning the shots, gaining his points more frequently on Channing's errors than his own placements.

The Lynch-Latona match was more interesting and closer, especially in the first set. Latona gave Lynch a stiff fight in the opening set but, after pulling up to 3—4, seemed to weaken before Hugh's uncanny sideline placements and superior baseline game.

All Lynch.

Seldom, if ever, had Lynch displayed the accuracy with his backhand that he did yesterday. He stationed himself in the back court throughout most of the macth, came to the net but seldom, and drove back every shot Tony sent to him.

The second set was all Lynch, as the 6—0 score indicates. Only in the first game, which was deuced once, did Hugh have trouble. He twice broke Latona's service with loss of only 2 points and finished up the match on his own service, losing only 1 point.

The semifinal doubles matches are scheduled today. Both are at 4:30 p. m. In one, Dooly Mitchell and Welsh, District champions, meet Lynch and Ed Baker, who is subbing for Davie Johnsen, and in the second, Channing and Ed Mather, who scored a stunning upset victory over Liwuts, Bill Howard and Jimmy Farrin in the quarter-finals, oppose fourth-seeded Bill Breese and Buddy Adair.

HARDY PEARCE, COACH, GIVES THE BOYS THE SEASON'S FIRST LECTURE.

D. C. Golfers Are Defeated

Mrs. Betty Meckley, Miss Brown Bow.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 1.—Medalist Mrs. Leon Solomon, Memphis, and Evelyn Marvin, Rio de Janeiro star, accounted for the Washington entries here today in the quarter-final round of the Women's Mason and Dixon Golf Championship, as the four favored players advanced.

Defending champion Virginia Guilfoil, Syracuse, played indifferent golf but it was good enough to defeat Mary Kuhn, Pittsburgh, 5 and 4, while Dorothy Traung, San Francisco's tournament favorite, defeated Jean Kyer, Ann Arbor, 3 and 1 and will meet Miss Guilfoil in a semi-final match tomorrow.

Mrs. Solomon defeated Marion Brown, District champion, 5 and 4, and Miss Marvin took the measure of Mrs. Betty Meckley, Washington, 3 and 2, in rain interrupted matches.

Miss Brown won the second hole against the medalist but lost the fourth through the sixth in succession, and was three down at the turn as she dropped the ninth. Miss Brown lost the tenth when she was trapped on her second shot and twelfth, where she missed a four-foot putt, and the match ended on the fourteenth green.

Mrs. Solomon and Miss Marvin will meet in the other semifinal encounter.

Monte Pearson Is Bombarded As Tigers Defeat Yankees, 6-3

Victory Gives Detroit the Series; Tom Henrich Hits His 21st Homer of Season.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 1.—Monte Pearson, who pitched a no-hitter his last timt out, didn't even come close today. The Detroit Tigers clubbed him for four runs in the fourth inning and coasted in with a 6-to-3 victory over the crippled Yankees.

The win gave the Tigers the current series, two games to one, and marked the first time since June 22 that the Yanks have lost two games in a row.

Pearson, tagged for ten hits, had his personal winning streak snapped at ten straight and was charged with his sixth setback against 13 victories for the year. The defeat sliced the Yanks' American League lead to 13 games over the Boston Red Sox.

Minus Regular Third Baseman Red Rolfe, Catcher Bill Dickey and Leftfielder George Selkirk, all of whom were sidelined with assorted ailments, the Yanks showed little of their customary power. Only Tommy Henrich, latest of the long-range wallopers in the Yankee firing line, was up to the usual form with his twenty-first homer of the year.

Relief Pitcher George Coffman made his first start of the year, allowing eight hits in the eight innings he worked, and clearing the bases with a timely double in the big Tiger splurge in the fourth. Harry Eisenstat was summoned in the ninth, when the Yankees threatende to go on one of their typical sprees, and wound up the game without further damage.

Presidents Start Drills

Forty Candidates Out for Team.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 1.—Forty candidates for varsity berths on the George Washington High School football team reported for the season's inaugural drill today under the direction of the new coaching staff, composed of Albert Doran, former University of Ohio grid star, and Willis Benner, who concluded his athletic career with the University of Maryland last year. Some 20 additional candidates are expected to turn out before the end of the week.

Limbering-up exercises, punting and passing, and dummy tackling featured today's session. Heavy work will not start until next week. The first scrimmage will probably be held next Tuesday.

Of the 14 returning lettermen from last year's squad, only three were absent from practice. They were Co-captain Harold Payne, tackle; Page Waller, a guard, and Jimmy Taylor, an end. Monogram-wearers taking part in the practice included Eddie Nowland and Jack Payne, ends; "Dinky" Scott, Eddie Dove, Stanley Heflin, Deaver Lacey, and "Bo" Robinson, backs; Billy Garth, tackle, and Ed Snyder, guard.

The principal problems confronting Doran and Benner lie in finding a back to replace Dick Burrell, triple-threat of last year, and a center to fill the gap left vacant by the graduation of all three of last year's pivot men.

Sanley Heflin, a southpaw and kicker, looms as a likely successor to Burrell, while Jack Payne, a varsity end of last year, is out for the center position.

The squad will work out twice tomorrow, the first drill being slated for 10 a. m., and the second for 2:30 p. m.

Colonial Maid Victor.

The Bomar Stable won its second straight feature race at Detroit with Colonial Maid coming through in the 5-furlong dash for 2-year-olds. The chestnut filly scored well in hand and paid $520.

Sailboats in Race.

Oakland, Md., Sept. 1 (AP).—Skippers of 28 sailboats in Maryland's "mountain fleet" will participate in the Deep Creek Yacht Club's week-end regatta.

Jockey Is Injured At Aqueduct Meet.

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Clifford Stafford, veteran jockey, from Claremore, Okla., was seriously injured, a 100-to-1 shot won and two horses bled—all in the same race at Aqueduct today.

Stafford, 24-year-old rider, was badly bruised, received severe cuts about the head and probable internal injuries when he went down with J. C. Williams' 7-year-old gelding, Aubys Boy, in the second race. It was reported the horse bled and fell, rolling over on the rider.

W. F. Morgan's Sand Bag also bled after running away during the parade to the post. He was caught and withdrawn from the race. The winner turned up in Mrs. B. Fransheim's Gay Troubadour, which, at 100 to 1, paid the longest odds of the metropolitan season.

Bill Ackerman . . . . . News of Fishermen

ACKERMAN.

Anglers, in all truth, these days, are singing the blues. They have caught enough of the one and two pounders to know they are in our waters, not only by trolling, but in many cases by grinding. The scarcity of chum has made this latter fishing almost impossible, and at this time of the year it is the only sure way to get them to the hooks.

More than a few anglers have called to tell us the single cases of menhaden they have been able to get from Reedville was just about enough to get the fish started up, and about the time the real fishing would get goign the menhaden would be exhausted.

It looks as though the lower Virginia shore is still having the best of the fishing, for Floyd Rollins, at Messick, and Capt. T. S. Clopton, at Gloucester Point, continue to report daily catches that run from 60 to 200, with a fair number of good-sized cabio at the latter place.

Considering the fact that menhaden are easy to get in this section, the difference in distance is not so hard to take, and seems to be a good bet for over Labor Day, although Capt. Taft Tipett, at Ridge, reports the blues plentiful on the Middies, with some cabio and channel bass (probably black drum), a trip that is just about half of that to the lower bay.

At Solomons Island, Capt. Ed Bowen gives us the first report we have had in weeks from that section, with the exception of one good catch b yCapt. Preston Lore, some days ago. The rock, weighing up to four pounds, are rising every evening for as long as an hour at a time in the area off Rocky Point (3 miles above Cove Point) and the boats are taking from five to ten. One Tuesday a single boat got into a school of seatrout to the tune of 27, and all boats bottom fishing are getting a few blues.

The big schools of Norfolk spot, that for the past 10 days have been producing so much sport for anglers down around Old Point Comfort, seem to be moving up the bay, for some excellent catches of these fish have been made at Solomons.

Commodore T. S. Jones, at North Beach, reports satisfactory catches of blues, rock, trout and Spanish mackerel, almost daily, and in sight of his dock between Chesapeake and North Beaches. The method here is trolling.

In Herring Bay, and above, the rock and trout are hitting, some days rather spasmodically, on others in the early morning and late evening. On Wednesday Joe Garrison's party, fishing out of West River with Capt. Crandall Trott, caught more than 40 rock that averaged close to 5 pounds.

Offshore fishermen have begun their fall trek to Southport, N. C., and hit its beginning right on the button, for last week saw it really swinging into its stride. Blues, barracuda, dolphin, mackerel, and trout are hitting "wonderful." The latter species are due to improve still more, and to continue good through November. The blues should be taking the feathers for at least another eight weeks.

Although local anglers, following this fishing, report their gear too light, they are nevertheless having some luck. Frank Pratt, fishing with John R. Peacock, of High Point, got a 30-pound barracuda; Peacock, one a pound better, and both caught several around 20. Another local rod and reeler, S. P. Spitz, has been hitting the dolphin and barracuda more than regularly on the edge of the stream.

Trout stream addicts have a swell chance to get one last fling at their sport on Jersey waters, through the opening of a 30-day fall season.

This late season, extending through September, and which was started in 1934, has become very popular. That this popularity will increase this season is a foregone conclusion, for the fine condition of the hundreds of streams, caused by the heavy rains during the summer months, has been the means of carrying through the many trout left in the water following the past successful season in fine condition. In addition, throughout the State, streams have been restocked with thousands of big fish.

During the earlier season, from April 15 to July 15, bag limits were caught, almost continuously, and this 30-day season is expected to satisfy even the most dyed-in-the-wool trout angler. The minimum limit is 7 inches, and the daily bag, ten.

Bass waters over almost the entire Potomac watershed were in reasonably good condition until Wednesday evening, and should be fishable over this week-end, although thunder squalls on that same evening and on Thursday might affect some waters.

The Shenandoah, above Charles Town, is in good shape, although reports show the bass not hitting well. The best results have been from the use of artificial lures. Just why bait fishing in the late evening hasn't been better is hard to say, because the moon has been dark. There are some good catches being made above Riverton, Va. Bath Forks are clear—best at Overall and Limeton.

Lower Potomac has been streaky, and poor fishing reported at Seneca, and up to Point of Rocks, even though Doctor Bill Holton did take a nice string from the latter place early this week. But then the ordinary fisherman would have tough going following Bill, for he takes them where they ain't."

The real highlight of the week was the taking of a mako shark by a commercial bluefisherman late Wednesday evening, just inshore of WinterQuarter Light Vessel on a hand line. Taking into consideration that it weighed around 1,000 pounds (estimated, because there were no scales large enough to weigh it). Taken to Salisbury for weighing later, it was some feat, for if you have ever hung on to a big fish with such gear, it is easy to recognize the handicap on the fisherman, particularly with the game mako. Too bad it could not have been taken on rod and reel, for it would have constituted a new world record. The one on the books now was taken down under on the Barrior and weighed 872 pounds.

Marion Brown Relinquishes Washington Post Women's Golf Title

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Reluctant Return.

As you see, that man is here again and I know you must resent the intrusion. After all this column was doing very well without him, and I quite understand your disappointment at finding him back on the job. But I assure you it isn't my fault. I'm in complete sympathy with you in fact. And as far as I'm concerned he could have stayed on his vacation indefinitely.

VIDMER.

He could have gone right on playing golf for all I care. He could have lounged around the locker room explaining how he almost won and offering alibis for his bad scores. He could have spent his days and nights with his silly old gang of loafers like Grantland Rice, Hal Sims, Fontaine Fox, George Morse, Pete McCoy, Henry McLemore, Cliff Roberts, Bud Killand and the rest, with never a care or thought about having to write a column for tomorrow's paper and tomorrow's and tomorrows'.

It wouldn't have bothered me a bit if he had spent the rest of the summer at the Petit Chalet in Kent, Conn., which he found so charming and where he claims you will find the best trout dinner in the country—or the city either for that matter.

I wouldn't have complained at all if he had sat there for a couple of weeks longer listening to Maurice Child, the proprietor, spin his interesting yarns of days in the black watch, adventures in the theater, anecdotes of Harry Lauder and legends of Kent School, its famous schoolboy crews and Father Sill.

He came back to work with a memory of a brief—too brief, he said—visit to Saratoga where he was royally entertained at the races by Frank Stevens and topped off a perfect afternoon by putting down a bet on Merry Lassie which won at 8 to 1. The lucky stiff. As far as I'm concerned he could have stayed at Saratoga and kept on playing the ponies. Even if he had kept on winning, I wouldn't have objected.

The North County.

He said he found Lake George a sight for sore eyes, something to view with the same breathless awe inspired by the Grand Canyon, and he found fun in revisiting The Hague where he used to spend his summers when he was somewhat younger.

It's just too bad that he ever grew up. Maybe he should have stayed up there where the mountains are upholstered with forests and the forests are reflected in the mirrors of the lake.

And his first visit to Manchester, Vt., apparently entranced him. He says it was too perfect for words, yet the words of praise for the place, the people and especially for his host and hostess seem to flow as freely as Niagara Falls.

"There," he said, "is the greatest place in the world. I have heard of it for several years but discounted all I heard. Now I find that it is impossible to exaggerate its beauty, its peace, its complete contentment and its hospitality. Why, listen, I played in a golf tournament up there and for the first 27 holes I couldn't bear to take a divot off the fairways. That's why I played so badly."

Huh! Just another excuse. What chance would a dub like that ever have to take a divot off a fairway? He's never on one. Still, if he thought it was so grand why didn't he stay there. I wouldn't have minded in the least. And I'm sure you wouldn't. The so-called pinch-hitters were doing a lot better than the regular. He should have stayed up there in Manchester and let them go on with the job. We might have won the pennant.

Gallant Stroke Wins.

Paul Kelley's favored Gallant Stroke made his move at the head of the stretch and then pulled away to a three-length victory over Sonia M. in the top event at Washington Park.

Sarron Drops Bout With Baby Manuel.

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 1 (AP).—Plans for a fight between Petey Sarron, of Birmingham, former featherweight champion, and Baby Manuel, of Cuba, were cancelled today after Sarron was ordered to drop the bout by Harvey Miller, secretary of the District of Columbia Athletic Commission.

SARRON.

Sarron is slated to meet Yucatan Kid, of Mexico at Washington October 3 and Maj. Miller gave the former Birmingham newsboy the option of dropping that bout or the one here.

Jimmy Erwin, boxing promoter here, said the Sarron-Manuel match would be staged after the Washington fight. It was originally scheduled for September 8.

Sarron, who lost his featherweight title to Henry Armstrong October 20, has had no fights since a recent operation for an arm ailment.

Five Former Champs Miss Annual Play

Entries Close Sept. 9 With Mrs. Powell; Event at Manor.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A new champion will be crowned in the sixth annual Washington Post Women's Match Play tournament, scheduled September 12 to 17 at Manor, as none of the five former winners will be in the starting field in the popular affair. It is the only match play event on the Women's District Golf Association schedule, excepting the city championship.

Defending Champion and District women's titleholder Marion S. Brown, 19-year-old Manor star, will be unable to play as she will leave on the 13th for the nationals at Westmoreland Country Club, Wilmette, Ill., that starts September 19 and continues through the 24th. Should Miss Brown play in the Post

MARION BROWN.

Cup and reach the title round she would be unable to reach the scene of the amateur championship in time for a tune-up round, and barely in time for the medal play.

Two former champions from the Chevy Chase Club, Miss Elizabeth Houghton and Miss Louise Claytor, are in England and Canada, respectively, and are not expected to return in time for the championship, while Mrs. Roland MacKenzie, 1934 winner, is no longer a resident of the city, and Gloria Rodgers, 1936 champ, stepdaughter of Wiffy Cox, has forsaken competitive golf.

The tournament is open to all club and District players, and the entrance fee is $1. Entries close a week from today with Mrs. J. T. Powell, Manor, at the Hotel Roosevelt, Decatur 0800.

The event opens Monday September 12 at Manor with an 18-hole qualifying round. The medalist will receive a trophy donated by The Post, won last year by Mrs. Betty Meckley, while the 32 low net scores will qualify for the match play rounds.

The first round, with the players receiving 7-8 handicap difference, will be played on Tuesday, second on Wednesday, quarter-finals Thursday, semifinals Friday and the finals on Saturday, September 17. The Washington Post trophy will go to the winner's club for a year while the 1938 champion will receive a replica.

With the exception of Miss Brown, Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, Mrs. Bishop Hill, Chevy Chase, and Helen Dettweiler, Congressional, who will play in the Nationals, the city's leading links stars are expected to enter the event in full force, and a field topping last year's 102 players is expected.

The Post Cup event last year proved the stepping stone to Marion Brown's rise as the city's leading linkswoman, for following her victory at Columbia, where she defeated the host club player, Mrs. E. M. Amick, in the final round, Miss Brown won the medal and advanced to the final of the Middle Atlantic, won two club titles and this year won the District title.

The tournament opens the fall schedule of the Women's District Golf Association with the President's Plate, Worby Cup, Middle Atlantic, team matches with Philadelphia and Baltimore, Times Cup and the field day for District teams following, through October 25.

Mrs. Medley Clears 12 Vocal Handicaps.

Mrs. C. P. Medley, handicap chairman of the Women's District Golf Association, has cleared 12 handicaps of 6 and under of local players, that makes them eligible for the National championship, but only Marion Brown, Mrs. Myron Davy and Mrs. Bishop Hill are certain of making the cross-country trek to Willmette, Ill.

Entries close tomorrow at noon with the United States Golf Association, New York City. The fee is $5.

Sixto Escobar Meets Transparenti Monday

Baltimore, Sept. 1 (AP).—Sixto Escobar, world bantamweight champion, will meet Lew Transparenti, of Baltimore, in a ten-round non-title bout here Monday night.

Helen Jacobs Seeded First In U. S. Singles Tournament

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 1.—Helen Jacobs was unexpectedly top seeded over Alice Marble, America's No. 1 women's singles player, in today's draw for the national tennis championships, starting Thursday at Forest Hills.

This seeding caused considerable surprise not only because the Los Angeles blonde is ranked No. 1 nationally, but because Miss Jacobs hasn't played since her defeat by Mrs. Helen Wills Moody at Wimbledon.

Meanwhile Alice hasn't lost since Wimbledon. She won the singles at Seabright and Rye and teamed with Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan to win the women's national doubles at Chestnut Hill.

Dr. S. Ellsworth Davenport, jr., chairman of the tennis association's national singles championships committee, explained that "Jake" was seeded above Alice because she had beaten Alice, 6—4, 6—4, in the Wimbledon semi-finals, the only time they met this year.

"Husky Helen," of Berkeley, Calif., has been resting since Wimbledon to regain lost weight and give her injured shoulder and ankle time to heal properly.

The draw revealed that 64 women are entered in the women's singles, the same number as last year, and 99 in the men's singles, 1 less than in '37. Don Budge, of Oakland, Calif., world No. 1 player, is top seeded among American men, with Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, in second position.

Mrs. Moody, Wimbledon champion, is not entered because of neuritis.

Among the 23 foreign men, representing 9 countries, Jack Bromwich, of Australia, is top seeded, while Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland, heads the list of 12 women from 7 foreign countries.

lower bracket, are favored to win through and meet in the final. Luck of the draw gave red-headed Budge a bye in the first round, but Bobby must tangle with Peter Lauck, of Wynnewood, Pa., on opening day.

The draw, held at the Vanderbilt Hotel, placed Adrian Quist, of Australia, at the bottom of the upper bracket, and his Davis Cup mate, Bromwich, at the bottom of the lower. They are expected to meet Budge and Riggs, respectively, in the semifinals.

Riggs and Bromwich should have stiffer opposition toward their semifinal than Budge and Quist. Riggs' quarter contains Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., national intercollegiate champion; Fumiteru Nakano, of Japan; Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif.; Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, and Franjo Puncec, of Yugoslavia. In Bromwich's lower quarter are such performers as Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg.; Yvon Petra, of France; Frankie Parker, of Beverly Hills, Calif.; Francis X. Shields, of New York, and Ernest Sutter, of New Orleans.

Smokers' Test showed Vintage Tobacco was EASIER ON YOUR BREATH

WHITE OWLS are definitely easier on your breath—scientific tests proved it. Every White Owl always has a filler of Vintage quality and—like a Vintage wine—nature made it exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast and unique crop-inspection system . . . classify all filler tobaccos into seven grades, using only tobacco of the top three for Vintage White Owls.

All this to give you a Vintage smoke. You'll like its taste—and ladies will admire your taste for choosing it. Try a White Owl today.

The Metallic Nose Knows

Scientists use a sensitive comoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten popular brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

Bill Terry's prediction that the Pirates should give the Yankees a battle in the World Series is all very nice and Pittsburgh appreciated it . . . But do the Yanks? They probably will remember the series of 1927 when they walloped what was supposed to be Pittsburgh's greatest team in four straight games . . . Whizzer White, like Red Grange, will wear the same jersey number (10) as a pro that he played under in college . . . Brainchild Scores Over Star Mint

Daughter of Omar Kahyyam Wins 3d Straight This Season.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro, Md., Sept. 1.—All opposition and all tracks seem to look alike to Lula Khayyam, a 3-year-old daughter of Omar Khayyam. In the Howard W. Jackson Purse, outstanding event of today's program, the filly turned in her third straight victory at a like number of tracks. She began her winning streak at Bel Air, scored in her only outing at Cumberland and triumphed at the first asking here.

The crowd of 4,000 snubbed her in the betting, but the faithful cheered lustily as a $15.20 mutuel was displayed. She turned in the good time of 1:09 1-5 for the five and a half furlongs.

With only 97 pounds in the person of the smallest jockey on the grounds, George Witmer, in her saddle, Lulu Khayyam finished a length and a half in front of Brainchild with Star Mint, the favorite, third.

Star Mint was in trouble virtually throughout the running, being blocked soon after the break and hemmed in on the rail. She closed briskly, however it was too late for anything but the show money.

Brainchild began as if she was going to make a runaway of it. She opened a good lead, but, despite Jockey Machado's almost frantic efforts, she could not cope with Lulu Khayyam's closing bid.

Favorites won the first three races. Broken Rhythm opened the program with a gallop in front of seven others, winning by six lengths and rewarding her backers with a $4.40 mutuel. Pretty Pal and Windsor Boy were second and third.

In as thrilling a finish as has been seen at the meeting, Bernard Bond's Sure Miss won her second purse by a nose in a photo struggle with My Shadow. The latter appeared to have the purse in her favor, but Jockey Machado kept trying and his mount closed with a rush that earned the money. Lena Girl was third. The winner paid $7.

One of the horses favored in a very poor start, Miss Hollywood, owned by W. H. Denham, of Washington, won the Crain Highway Purse, fifth event on the program. Idyllic finished second, beaten three lengths with Early Broom third. Early Broom would have been second but for Idyllic swerving in front of her nearing the finish. Miss Hollywood had a lukewarm backing at an $8.10 mutuel.

IN THE RED	(Berg)	110½	6	5	7½	7½	7½	8	46.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURE MISS, $7.00, $3.40, $2.50; MY SHADOW, $3.20, $3.00; LENA GIRL, $3.10.

SURE MISS, hard ridden while closest to pace of MY SHADOW, came gamely when placed to intermittent punishment and was up in final strides. MY SHADOW, first out of gate, set good pace, but weakened in final sixteenth and just missed lasting. LENA GIRL was forced wide at first turn and tired. TANGANYIKA went evenly, but was not a factor.

Daily Double, Broken Rhythm and Sure Miss, Paid $14.50.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place same. Went to post 3:18. Off 3:20. Winner, J. S. Archer's ch. f. (4), by Haste—Believe Sally. Trained by R. B. Archer. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:26 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SALLY QUICK, $4.20, $2.90, $2.70; CAN BLOOM, $4.70, $3.10; CHESSIE, $4.00.

SALLY QUICK assumed command at once, saved ground and drew out at rider's will through stretch. CAN BLOOM was forced to be pulled up sharply directly after break, was sent around horses to gain contention, but weakened in closing sixteenth. CHESSIE was off slightly, but could not better position. DOUBLE ON SEA showed an early effort—GEE SHARP had early speed and tired.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:52. Off 3:56. Winner, H. Massey's ch. f. (3), by Omar Khayyam—Cambetty. Trained by C. M. Massey. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:09 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LULA KHAYYAM, $18.20, $6.00, $3.20; BRAINCHILD, $4.80, $2.90; STAR MINT, $2.50.

LULA KHAYYAM, forward factor from break, came to outside of BRAINCHILD entering stretch and under good handling, won going away. BRAINCHILD, sent to front at once, set strong pace, but could not resist winner while under stout handling. STAR MINT was in trouble repeatedly and closed gamely. TULEYRIES LIN weakened after pressing pace for three furlongs. LADY'S FAVOR was off poorly and raced wide.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:26. Off 4:30. Winner, W. R. Denham's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS HOLLYWOOD, $8.10, $3.90, $3.00; IDYLLIC (entry), $5.90, $4.30; EARLY BROOM, $3.40.

MISS HOLLYWOOD, favored by the break and raced closest to pace of IDYLLIC, took command approaching stretch and drew out. IDYLLIC was rushed to take command in early stages, but weakened in closing test. EARLY BROOM, off poorly, worked way to contention and had to be pulled up sharply when blocked by IDYLLIC in closing 50 yards. BEST POLICY beat the gate, dropped back and rallied mildly in closing test.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:07, Off 5:09. Winner, Mrs. A. A. Gray's br. g. (7), by St. James—Daughter of Zeda. Trained by C. Beal. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:57 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMES BOY, $4.70, $3.40, $2.40; MORNING FLIGHT, $7.10, $3.80; HUPPY (entry), $2.40.

JAMES BOY, taken in hand for a half, came to inside of horses to take command with bold rush and won with ease. MORNING FLIGHT raced St. ETIENNE into defeat, but weakened in stretch. HUPPY went forwardly from start and was gaining gradually at end. BLAIR J. was poorly handled and was pulled up several times in the running. HEART PLAY weakened in closing half. KALSIDA had early speed.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:30. Off 5:31. Winner, Mrs. S. R. Teeter Totter,

Health Official Against Liberty For Puerto Rico

Doctor, Here for Parley, Says Many Prefer Link With U. S.

Dr. Eduardo Garrido-Morales, Puerto Rican commissioner of health, is one native official who will move out of Puerto Rico if independence ever should be granted.

MORALES.

"If the day comes when Puerto Rico is severed from the United States," he told The Post yesterday, "I won't remain there. I think the great majority of Puerto Ricans feel the same way."

"Vast progress in public health work—and in agriculture, labor and education as well—is directly due to the American occupation," he declared.

The commissioner who, like "95 per cent of the Puerto Rican doctors," was trained in this country, added that "more has been accomplished during the Roosevelt Administration than ever before."

Likes New Deal.

"I'm a 100 per cent New Dealer—yes, sir!" he declared. In fact, it was Dr. Garrido-Morales who, as Acting Governor, signed a bill passed by the insular legislature providing that a photograph of President Roosevelt be placed in every public school in the island.

An advocate of birth control "from the public health point of view," Dr. Garrido-Morales said he hopes for reversal of a recent decision that Federal laws forbidding dissemination of birth control information apply to the Territory.

"Birth control is an aid to the health of both mothers and children," the commissioner stated. "It also will help our population problem to some extent. However, birth control alone is not enough. We also need organized emigration to countries of low population density, such as Venezuela."

Dr. Garrido-Morales said his primary purpose in visiting the United States was to receive an honorary doctorate of science from Louisiana State University. He came to Washington, he said, to discuss Puerto Rican public health problems with Surgeon General Thomas Parran, Assistant Surgeon Generals Draper and Williams and others.

U. S. to Aid in Fight.

"We plan to start a venereal disease program this year with the aid of the United States Public Health Service," Dr. Garrido-Morales said. But venereal disease isn't the worst scourge in Puerto Rico. Tuberculosis, malaria, and hookworm are among the outstanding problems of the island, the commissioner declared.

He said that four general hospitals are being constructed at the present time with PWA aid. Their maintenance will be paid from funds raised by public lottery.

"Formerly, large sums of money were sent to the other West Indian islands, South America and Spain," he said. "Now that we have our own lottery, that money remains in Puerto Rico."

Dr. Garrido-Morales said that under his administration, public health units with full-time personnel have been expanded to cover the entire island. A tuberculosis program providing for 1,000 hospital beds for the isolation of open cases also has begun, he stated.

He said that he soon will return to Puerto Rico with Dr. Charles Hedges, assistant superintendent of Johns Hopkins Hospital, who will act as his adviser in hospital administration on the island.

The Federal Diary

Rez. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

M. M. Allen, of Greensboro, N. C., sends us a copy of a letter he has sent Representative Martin L. Dies, chairman, Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, which says in part:

"One of the greatest dangers confronting our Nation at the present time is the growth of the nudist movement, and if there is anything that is un-American, it is certainly nudism. As is well known, this is a common practice in various foreign countries, and has existed for many years in Russia, the home of communism, as well as in Germany.

"I strongly urge that your committee include the investigation of the nudist cult and its work. You are accomplishing a most commendable work, but it will be incomplete if you do not arouse public sentiment against this revolting and shameful movement.

"Not only should the committee investigate the goings-on at the nudist camps which are found all over the country, but it should look into nudist literature. The pictorial literature is bad enough with portraits of naked men and women, but what is more dangerous, because it is more insidious, is the highbrow literature which seeks to persuade the intellectuals that nudity is conducive intelligence . . . I earnestly urge your committee to go into the whole matter thoroughly."

Truman Felt, acting director of the PWA press section, last night celebrated his fifteenth wedding anniversary with a quiet party t the Shoreham Hotel . . . Your next issue of the Federal Organizer, organ of the U. F. W. A., will be the Federal Record, the editors having decided to change the name . . .

The office of the new Wage-Hour Division is busy now with many representatives from private industry who want to know how their businesses stand under the governmental provisions. And, at the moment, but very little information can be given because the office has no staff as yet. But still on the job is Eugenia Pope, who works long hours in almost a single-handed attempt to handle the tremendous volume of business—she isn't exactly single-handed now; they've given her a stenographer. We would like to emphasize to Wage-Hour Division job-seekers that practically all employment there will come through the civil service. The commission, as yet, has not arranged for examinations, but undoubtedly will very soon, as the new division is champing at the bit to get going.

You probably have heard that the Agriculture Department Inter-Union Council has formulated a promotion plan to be submitted to Personnel Director Roy Hendrickson. We think one of the most interesting offshoots is the comment made thereon by the ultra-conservative Agriculture Exchange, a journal that has prided itself on keeping out of union squabbles by displaying a chin-lifting impartiality to them all. We quote from its current editorial:

"Never once have we shown favoritism toward any one of the three employe unions in Agriculture. Despite our personal preferences, it is our strict policy to be impartial in such matters. In recent weeks an inter-union council comprising all three bodies has been working on a proposal for a promotions policy in co-operation with the director of personnel . . . It is fine when three units of three different national organizations can show such fine co-operation despite the fact that their parent bodies are at each other's throats. They illustrate well the need and feasibility of national unification. Now, what we said about favoritism still goes. However, there is one significant observation we have made. So we shall give credit where credit is due. The initiative and work behind the proposals appear to largely come from the United Federal Workers lodge in Agriculture. Possibly a solution to the problem of multiple unions may come from the fine example set by this department. If other departments followed the excellent example set here, it may be a driving wedge into the obstacles, chief of which is the fact that if there were only one union, two sets of national officers would lose their salaries."

Daring talk. And coming from the source it did is the thing. Maybe the I. D. R. A. will speak out next!

Many Ask to Adopt Twins of Waitress

Officials of Alexandria Hospital and Mrs. T. Clifton Howard, probation officer of Alexandria juvenile court, are being besieged with applications for the adoption of the twin babies, a boy and a girl, born to Mrs. Ella Stevens in the hospital a few days ago.

Mrs. Howard yesterday received a telegram from Chicago asking that no disposal of the babies be made until the sender can come to Alexandria; a university professor and his wife, who are visiting in Washington, told Mrs. Howard they could not return to their homes without the twins, while a Washington businessman who lost a small child recently, is equally anxious to adopt the chilren. Numerous other requests, all of which ask permission to adopt both babies, have been received, but Mrs. Howard says she can take no action until the return of Corporation Judge William P. Woolls, who is on his vacation.

The Post yesterday referred to the babies as being the children of Mrs. Irene Manley Roszell. Mrs. Roszell is the superintendent of Alexandria Hospital, and the article in question should have stated that applications for the adoption of the children are being made to her as head of the hospital.

Mrs. Howard said 25 applications have been received. Mrs. Stevens, separated from her husband, and the mother of a 6-year-old child by a former marriage, has expressed willingness to relinquish all claim on the babies to allow them the care she would be unable to provide on her salary as a waitress.

Gallup Poll Reveals Favorite in Georgia Primary

The coming Georgia primary election is one of the most important political tests of the Roosevelt "purges." Due to the intense interest in this primary, the Gallup Poll has made a special survey among the Georgia voters. With two more weeks of campaigning still to go, how is public opinion divided on the three candidates? Will the voters choose Senator George, whom President Roosevelt denounced as a "dyed-in-the-wool conservative"? Former Gov. Eugene Talmadge? Or will it be New Dealer Lawrence Camp, who has the President's personal approval? Read the Gallup Poll in this Sunday's Post for the results of this special survey.

Gallup Poll Predicted "Cotton Ed" Smith's Victory in South Carolina

Again the Gallup Poll has proved accurate in its prediction. Due to a highly perfected method of estimating public opinion, the Gallup Poll has called the turn in 56 out of 62 local and national elections. The Post is the only newspaper in Washington which publishes the Gallup Poll.

What Does the Public Think of the Charges Against "Jimmy" Roosevelt?

What did the public think of the charges made against "Jimmy" Roosevelt after they read the article by Alva Johnston in a national magazine? And what was their reaction after they read "Jimmy's" reply in another magazine. You'll find the answer in this Sunday's Gallup Poll.

Motor Stocks Advance 6.7% During August

But Average of 100 Issues Declines 2.1 Per Cent for the Month.

New York, Sept. 1.—Declining tendencies in stock prices were evident in August and the market value of 100 representative common issues receded $385,182,000 or 2.1 per cent in the month, according to the monthly compilation issued by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. The list was valued at $17,456,930,000 at the end of August. In the preceding month, stocks advanced 7.3 per cent to $17,842,112,000 at the end of July.

Only three groups managed to hold part of the previous month's advance. They were the motors, which advanced to 6.7 per cent followed by the merchandising shares which were almost unchanged, showing but a 0.9 per cent gain. Leading the groups in the decline were the oils, showing a decline of 8.4 per cent, followed by the railroad equipments 7.5 per cent, and the carrier group which receded but 2.2 per cent from its July level.

The following table shows the extent of price changes by groups during August: (000's omitted'.

Celanese Corp. Sells $10,000,000 Issue

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Celanese Corporation of America has sold privately $10,000,000 of ten-year 4¼ per cent sinking fund debentures, it was announced today. It was also announced the company has increased its bank loans to $5,000,000 from $4,500,000 and placed them on the basis of serial maturities.

Proceeds of the financing are to be used, it was said, "in further developments and changes designed to obtain economies in operations." The corporation declined to reveal the name of the purchaser of the debentures and the price at which sold. Its properties are in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Connecticut.

N. Y. Central to Borrow $5,000,000 at 2%

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the New York Central Railroad Co. yesterday to borrow $5,000,000 from the National City Bank of New York, the loan to be guaranteed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The New York Central will pay 2 per cent interest for the money, one-half per cent of which will go to the RFC in consideration of its guarantee.

Railroads borrowing direct from the RFC pay 4 per cent interest. This is the first time a railroad has borrowed from private sources with the RFC guaranteeing the loan.

Brokers' Loans Rise $54,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $561,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $54,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,171,000,000.

Cotton Steady; Foreign Buying

New York, Sept. 1 (AP).—Cotton moved narrowly today but the undertone was about steady owing to foreign buying. December advanced from 8.27 to 8.33 but encountered a little liquidation late in the day to close at 8.29. Final prices were unchanged to 1 point net lower.

The market opened 1 to 3 points lower influenced by disappointing Liverpool cables and a second private estimate for a crop slightly above 12,000,000 bales. Prices responded to buying from Liverpool and Bombay for net gains of 2 to 3 points. Locals were inclined to sell owing to the action of the stock market but sellers were cautious owing to expectations the cotton loan would have a general stabilizing influence.

Subsidy Holds Wheat Prices Fairly Steady

Chicago Market Firm Despite Sharp Declines Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 1. (AP).—Although losing fractions, Chicago wheat prices today continued to buck the recession under way in other world markets.

While Liverpool and Winnipeg quotations fell as much as 1 and 2 cents a bushel respectively to new low levels for the last several years, and Rotterdam dropped 2½ to 4½, the Chicago market followed this decline only partially and before the close exhibited recovery power. Some traders attributed this independent action to the effect of operation of the export subsidy program.

An explanation offered by Bartlett Frazier Co. was that removal of hedges in connection with Government cash wheat buying gave a certain stability to the domestic market, though the effect elsewhere of the program, it was said, would throw Chicago further out of line.

After dipping at one time as much as 1¼ cents, Chicago prices closed only ⅛@⅞ lower compared with yesterday's finish, September 62⅝@62¾, December 64¼@54⅜. Corn was ¾ to ⅞ lower, September 52@52⅛, December 50¼@50⅜; oats ⅛ off to ⅛ up; rye ⅜ to ¾ down; lard 7 to 10 lower.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler, A Special Correspondent.

Labor Impasse Leads to Heavy Selling of Rail Securities, Weakening Market.

New York, Sept. 1.—Heavy selling of railroad stocks and bonds featured security markets today, the liquidation coming on the announcement from Chicago late Wednesday that railroad management and labor had been unable to agree on the proposed 15 per cent reduction in wages. The attempt to mediate the demand of the roads failed, for while the managements agreed to accept arbitration in principle, the unions did not.

The legal formula to be followed in such cases calls now for a strike vote by the unions but it does not mean an immediate walkout, even though the workers vote in favor of a strike, for the matter first would go before a special arbitration board appointed by the President. In no event can the status of either side be changed for 30 days, and should it go to arbitration, eventually before a special board, the probability is an additional month would be required, which would permit time for both sides to adjust differences.

Markets put a bearish interpretation on the Chicago deadlock but there is no reason to give up hope of a compromise which should help the carriers fight off the sheriff. The stock market averaged 0.47 point lower in trading of 508,770 shares. The average of the rails broke to a new low for the current move and in so doing exerted sufficient influence to carry the general market under the low reached in the sharp break Monday when the European situation became so cloudy. The averages of the industrial stocks held a minor fraction above the Monday low.

Representative issues opened slightly down today and selling in the carrier shares increased in the second hour. Volume increased on this selloff. In the afternoon the list drifted aimlessly, with another attack on prices appearing before the close. Utilities generally were firm but industrial groups moved along after the rails.

Railroad Declines.

New York Central was the most active of the rail division today and closed down ½, followed by Southern Pacific, off ¾. Losses of other representative carriers included Coast Line, 1⅞; Atchison, 1¼; D. & H., 1¼; Illinois Central, ¾; Nickel Plate, 1; Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania, ½; Southern, 1; and Union Pacific, a point.

Aside from the rail division, the balance of the market did little to cause excitement. The assumption is that board rooms will be fairly well deserted Friday and Saturday as traders leave town for an extended week-end, moreover there is a tendency to sit by and watch the European situation, the next turn in which is looked for Tuesday when Hitler makes his scheduled speech.

General Motors was again the day's most active stock and closed down ¾ while Chrysler was off 1⅝, Bethlehem and United States Steel kept pace with the general trend. Fractional declines characterized the aviation and building divisions, as well as the motion pictures, although the last named fought the decline.

Chicago wheat prices fell away in sympathy with weakness in Liverpool and Winnipeg, where futures made new lows for the past few years, but then rallied to close off only ¼ to ⅞ cent, the comeback being associated with the export subsidy plan. Cotton had a firm undertone and closed unchanged to off 1 point.

Rail Bonds Suffer.

Railroad bonds were hard hit today by the overnight announcement that mediation efforts had been abandoned in the effort to adjust rail wage rates. Declines of 1 to 3 points were the rule among the more vulnerable issues, while even best rated carrier issues lost fractions. The entire bond list was unsettled by the development, while other news was not much more encouraging. Treasury issues again slipped slightly lower. Foreign dollar bonds were dull and irregular. Trading totaled $3,790,000.

Intermediate-priced carrier issues were down sharply on the rail wage incident, and losses appeared also in borderline and default securities. The losses ranged around a point in the more active bonds, but occasional declines up to 3 points resulted. The cheaper bonds in some instances are beginning again to flirt with the lows of the year, but better-rated obligations still rest far over such levels. The few carrier issues in the money market classification dipped fractionally.

United States Treasury bonds dropped 1-32 to 5-32 point, in continuance of the move that started early in the week. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations also were dull. Best rated utility and industrial issues were motionless. Speculative holding company issues lost ground, as did local tractions, communications and other special groups.

Some German bonds advanced in the foreign section, owing to repayment of several bank issues. Latin-American default bonds were dull throughout. Japanese and Italian issues were irregular, and best rated foreigns held to former levels.

Kennecott Net $8,238,985 For Half Year

Income of 76 Cents a Share Compares With $2.47 in the 1937 Period.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 1.—Kennecott Copper Corporation and subsidiaries today reported for the six months ended June 30 consolidated net income of $8,238,985 after charges including depreciation but without deduction for depletion, equal to 76 cents a share of capital stock. This compared with $26,751,951, or $2.47 a share, in the similar 1937 period.

Borden Co.

The Borden Co. and subsidiaries for six months ended June 30 reported net earnings of $2,823,674, or 64 cents a share, compared with $3,963,065 or 85 cents a share for the like 1937 period. T. G. Montague, president, in a letter to stockholders accompanying a 30-cent dividend check payable today, said decreased earnings of the ice cream division had been caused by unseasonable temperatures and frequent rains during May and June. The company, he said, now handles about 6 per cent of the milk and milk products distributed in cities and villages in the United States, processing its products in 125 plants.

Associated Dry Goods.

Associated Dry Goods Corporation, a holding company operating department stores, reported today estimated net loss of $510,000 for the six months ended July 30, compared with net loss of $10,000 for the same period last year. The company has interests in New York, Buffalo, Baltimore, Newark, Louisville and Minneapolis.

Rust's Bequests Memorials to Wife and Son

3 Protestant Institutions Benefit Under Will of D. C. Realtor.

Leaving substantial legacies to Washington Protestant eleemosynary institutions, the will of Harry Lee Rust, filed yesterday in District Court, disclosed that he intended his gifts to become memorials to his late wife, Mrs. Josephine Wheelwright Rust.

The will directed that legacies be given the Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Washington, the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation and the Episcopal Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat hospital. The bequests are to form a memorial for his wife, who took a prominent part in the restoration of George Washington's birthplace at Wakefield Manor, Va., and to the late Gwinn Wheelwright Rust, his son.

The will provides that a seven-story building at 1302 Eighteenth street northwest, which runs through from 1301 to 1315 Connecticut avenue northwest, shall be held by the three beneficiaries as tenants in common. The value of the building, plus other properties left by Mr. Rust, will not be known until a petition for the probate of his will is filed next week.

One-third of the monies going to the convention are to be used to curtail current expenses, the remainder to be used as needed. Both the hospital and the Foundation are to use their bequests as they please.

Household and personal belongings go to a son, Harry Lee Rust, jr., with three grandchildren, Mary Jane Rust, Harry L. Rust, 3d, and Rosalind Rust to take whatever he does not wish. Everything left after the payment of the bequests is to go to Harry Lee Rust, jr. The law firm of Minor, Gatley & Drury and the son were named executors. Mr. Rust died here August 22.

Runciman Plea For Peace Held Sent to Hitler

London Is Encouraged by Report Message Was Carried by Henlein.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 1.—Viscount Runciman, Britain's unofficial mediator in the Czechoslovak-German crisis, was authoritatively reported today to have addressed a personal appeal for peace to Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

These reports said the appeal was sent to Hitler at Berchtesgaden through Konrad Henlein, leader of the Sudeten German party, who conferred with the Fuehrer at his Bavarian retreat today.

It was said that Runciman, believing Henlein genuinely desirous of peace, asked the German minority leader to deliver an appeal to Hitler to approve continuation of negotiations through Runciman on the Sudeten German autonomy demands.

Acceptance Hoped.

Runciman's ability thus to reach Hitler, who stands as "protector" of Czechoslovakia's 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans, surprised London diplomatic circles. They found it highly significant that Henlein had been willing to deliver the message.

There was general hope the message would help influence Hitler in a decision to approve the latest Czechoslovak government proposals of concessions to the Sudeten Germans as a basis for further negotiation.

Even so, authoritative persons felt "chances are even" Hitler would adopt one of the following courses:

Call off the negotiations and threaten war unless the minority's demands were immediately fulfilled.

Take the view that the Czechoslovak proposals are far-reaching enough to justify acceptance as a basis for negotiation and at the same time enable him to say he had obtained "justice" for the minority without war, thus demonstrating the concern for peace to which he is publicly committed.

Temporize by demanding a plebiscite for the Sudeten Germans in return for a German promise to keep the peace for 20 years or some such time.

This latter course would be reminiscent of Hitler's tactics at the time of the Rhineland occupation of 1936 and informed persons asserted it would be an astute move.

If France and Britain approved the plebiscite move, it would lead, in the view of informed sources, to a virtual union of the Sudetens with Germany while disapproval would lay the democracies open to a German charge they were unconcerned for world peace.

London, however, retained some hope the second course would be followed in view of the fact that Germany was as much interested as Britain in American reaction to the crisis and was worried by the tone of the American press.

A section of the British press today praised the United States' interest in the matter and one newspaper predicted President Roosevelt might send Hitler a warning similar to Britain's—that one could not be sure how far a middle European war might spread.

I'M REALLY SHOCKED! MAN, DO YOU REALIZE WHAT YOU ARE SAYING?
YOUR WIFE?
HERESY

Bob Burns Says—

I was reading the other day where the crooks of this country cost the Government and its citizens several billion dollars every year. I couldn't understand how this was possible until a wealthy lady explained it to me in a roundabout way. She was ravin' about a maid of hers that stole her diamond necklace.

She said, "These crooks not only steal from honest people, but they beat our Government out of the income tax on their crooked gain." I says, "Well, if you're sure the maid stole the necklace, why don't you tell the police?" and the lady says, "Well, I can't very well do that because I smuggled the necklace over here from Europe!"

Board Sustains Fireworks Arrests

The police trial board yesterday cleared Policeman Charles F. Fox of the Eleventh Precinct of charges that his action in arresting seven boys for shooting fireworks July 1 was "prejudicial to the reputation, good order and discipline of the police force."

Fox arrested the seven boys near his home at 4206 Twelfth place northeast, and took them to the Twelfth Precinct in a patrol wagon. They were later turned over to their parents.

Numbers Runner Held for Hearing; Tries to Eat Slips

Although he tried to eat the evidence, Ralph Garrett, 35, colored, of the 100 block of D street northwest, yesterday was ordered to appear before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage September 8 for a hearing on charges of operating a lottery and possessing numbers slips.

Garrett was one of two men arrested by the vice squad at First and M streets northeast.

New Tax Decisions To Wait on Budget

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday that any new tax legislation "must be hooked up closely with the new budget" and therefore the Administration's tax program could not finally be shaped for some time.

The Treasury's tax recommendations, he told reporters, may not be made public until about the first of the year, or, at the earliest, when Congressional committees begin annual hearings in November or December.

Widower Weds at 70 To Get Better Cooking

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 1 (AP).—Explaining he had tired of his own cooking, Sherman K. James, 70, a widower of Grand Rapids, Mich., broke a resolution not to rewed and was married here today to Mrs. Jennie E. Helsel, 67, a widow.

Flunking May Aid Later, Says Dean

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP).—If you flunk in college this year, don't get discouraged. You might be a success in business.

This counsel came today from Dr. Samuel N. Stevens, dean of the University College at Northwestern University. His explanation:
